BOY SLAYERS BOTH CONFESS

ROOSEVELT AND HOOVER TO TALK OF DEBT IN VAIN

Congress Decides Problem for Them.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 20.—[Special.]—President Hoover and President Elect Roosevelt will discuss the war debts owed the United States on Tuesday at a White House meeting that is already shorn of any great importance.

Democratic leaders here have been informed that Gov. Roosevelt will avoid any agreement or commitment regarding the debt question and will decline to assume any responsibility for the answer President Hoover will make to the debtors asking a reopening of the 11 billion dollar debt settlements and a suspension of payments pending revision.

As for President Hoover, his hands will be tied by the knowledge that congress, which alone will determine the policy to be adopted toward the debtors, is overwhelmingly opposed to reduction of the debts and suspension of any of the payments.

Congress Controls Situation.

When the President invited his successor to confer on the matter he was proceeding on the assumption that they possessed the power to mold, if not determine, the course to be pursued. The revelation of the temper of congress in the intervening week, however, has served to demonstrate how little the outgoing and incoming chief executives count for in this situation.

When the President invited the President elect to confer it was well known that Mr. Hoover favored a reopening of the debt settlements, if not suspension of payments pending reconsideration. He soon found that congress would not sustain him in that position. It therefore falls out that unless he flouts the legislative branch he will return an answer to Great Britain, France, and Belgium declining to suspend the Dec. 15 debt payments and holding out no promise of reduction of the debt terms.

Sympathy for Britain.

The President, it is known, would like to bring about some arrangement before the end of his term whereby Great Britain, if not other debtors, would obtain at least a temporary lessening of the payments due the United States. He feels that such a concession is deserved because the British originally settled on a basis of being the debtor most able to pay and is now about the least able, as a result of being forced off the gold standard.

There is unquestionably more sympathy for Great Britain than for France in congress, and some think that for this reason the debt settlements will be reopened before the end of the winter provided the debtors make the Dec. 15 payment and then renew their pleas for amelioration of the terms. Others are of the opinion that the whole matter will go over till after the Roosevelt administration and the 73d congress come into power on March 4.

Opinion Divided on Outcome.

Opinion is divided on what is likely to be the ultimate fate of the debts. Some think that the principal debtors, once they find their maneuvers for reduction unsuccessful, will continue to make the payments because of the danger of ruining their credit if they should default.

Those who hold to this point out that in no case does the annual payment on the debts by each debtor nation amount to more than 2 or 3 per cent of its annual budget. They contend, therefore, that each debtor is well able to pay and is simply endeavoring to wiggle out of its obligations because it has ceased to receive German reparations.

Others are of the opinion that the European countries do not intend to continue paying the United States even if it becomes necessary to default, on the theory that their credit will be impaired nowhere except in the United States and perhaps only temporarily here.

American Taxpayers Suffer.

Never before has there been a keener realization of what repudiation of the debts would mean to the American taxpayers. If Europe does not pay the 11 billions 500 millions of principal and ten billions of interest provided for in the settlements the American people will be compelled to foot the bill. This would mean adding American taxpayers with about 800 millions additional taxes annually.

ROBERT CUTTING, LEADER IN GOLF CIRCLES, IS DEAD

Robert Myron Cutting, president of the United States Golf association and a leader in the golf world, died suddenly last night at the home of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Bartelme, in Hubbard Woods. He was the son of former Judge Charles S. Cutting. Death came unexpectedly and apparently resulted from a heart attack. His wife, Mrs. Mary Bartelme Cutting, was with him at the end.

Mr. Cutting was 50 years old and lived at the Hinsdale Golf club, where Judge Cutting also resides. Mr. Cutting was president of the R. M. Cutting company, 401 North Ogden avenue, makers of the Chicago trucks.

Aside from business affairs, he was widely known in golfing. He was elected to head the United States Golf association only last week. At the time he was its vice president. He was formerly president of the Western Golf association and was greatly interested in sports throughout his life. He was a star baseball player in his youth and played on the team of the University of Michigan, of which he was an alumnus.

Funeral services will be announced today. Surviving Mr. Cutting are his widow and his father.

WALKER REACHES FRENCH RIVIERA; PLANS MEMOIRS

VILLEFRANCHE, France, Nov. 20. —(AP)—Former Mayor James J. Walker of New York City landed at this Riviera resort today from the steamship Conte Grande. Asked whether he intended to remain for a while, Walker said: "I haven't made up my mind, but you will find out in a couple of days."

It was learned he had telephoned Paris before making a decision and was likely to choose a village in the foothills of the Alps for his residence if he stayed. Unconfirmed reports were that he received a $50,000 offer for his memoirs from an American magazine and may write them here.

He asserted he came to play golf and rest and he had nothing to say on public affairs. Betty Compton, the actress, and her mother disembarked from the same liner.

Herriot's Life Saved in Plot to Wreck Train

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—The Breton autonomist movement leaped into the limelight again at 5:30 this morning with a loud bang.

Like the demonstration a few months ago at Rennes, it was a bombing. This time the explosives were not placed at the base of a plaque, but under the railway tracks over which a special train carrying Premier Edouard Herriot to Nantes for the celebration of the 400th anniversary of the union of France and Brittany was due to pass.

The blast wrecked the track at Ingrandoe, 15 miles from Nantes, an hour before the ministerial train was due, and gendarmes discovered the danger in plenty of time to prevent a catastrophe.

Find Red Warning Flares.

This apparently was what the plotters desired. Even the police do not believe it was a serious attempt on the premier's life. In fact the "assassins" took the precaution of placing red warning flares at a safe distance up and down the track before touching off the fuse.

The explosion only delayed Herriot's train two hours and the official celebration went through without a hitch. The premier returned to Paris late tonight without any further incidents.

Ten Breton autonomists, including a woman, were arrested and held as a precautionary measure. The police are without clews.

The explosion shook the French press loose from a veil of secrecy which the government had imposed upon it since Herriot's visit to Brittany last summer when the plaque at Rennes commemorating the fusion of Brittany and France was destroyed. Herriot himself revealed that he had been warned an attempt would be made to assassinate him during the ceremonies at Vannes, near Rennes.

Warned by Irish.

The warning came from the Irish government on the strength of a sinister letter published in an Irish newspaper, thus indicating that there is some connection between the Breton autonomists and certain Gaelic extremists.

More sensational was today's announcement, heretofore suppressed, that Dr. Koerber, Paris correspondent of one of Adolf Hitler's National Socialist newspapers in Berlin, has been expelled from France because two Bretons arrested for the Rennes outrage are said to have told the police that Koerber instigated the bombing.

This inspired one afternoon paper to print a front page headline which read, "German Attempt on Premier's Life." Herriot was quoted by one government controlled new agency as saying that the autonomist agitation in Brittany is undeniably being encouraged by German gold.

French Press Cautious.

All statements in the French press regarding the autonomist movement must be taken with reservations. Today's dynamiting was handled with the greatest caution by all the press, virtually nothing but a semi-official handout being published.

The immediate motive for the plot was the resentment over Herriot's trip to Nantes. The Bretons favoring autonomy were particularly touchy because it was at Nantes that the treaty annexing the province to France was signed, and the main object of the trip was to unveil a plaque in the court yard of the ancient chateau of the duke of Brittany commemorating that event.

The Bretons racially are just as different from the French as the Irish from the English. They speak a tongue closely related to Gaelic. But there the parallel stops, for the Bretons were not conquered but annexed with their full consent and have lived contentedly for more than three centuries under French rule.

REMOVE ROBINS FROM HOSPITAL TO SANITARIUM

Patient Continues to Deny Identity.

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 20.—(AP)—For the second time in as many days, Raymond Robins, prohibition advocate, peered at his wife out of blank eyes today and apparently failed to recognize her.

Not a glimmer of recognition followed Mrs. Robins' second visit to a hospital where her husband, stricken with amnesia, is seeking to recover his memory under the care of specialists, said Mrs. Robins.

Wearing overalls and heavy boots, and his face covered with a shaggy beard, Mr. Robins was found Friday at Whittier, a small village almost hidden away in the Great Smoky mountains of western North Carolina.

At Whittier Most of Time.

He had been at Whittier virtually ever since his sensational disappearance on Sept. 3, when he suddenly dropped out of sight after starting to keep an engagement with President Hoover on Sept. 6.

Today's meeting between Robins and his wife was at Appalachian hall, a sanitarium to which he was transferred from Norburn hospital this morning. Dr. M. A. Griffin, physician in charge of the case, is chief physician at Appalachian hall.

Mrs. Robins, who raced here by train and motor from Florida upon learning that her husband had been found, smiled bravely when she left the sanitarium after a 15 minute visit with her husband.

Aside from Robins' inability to recognize her and remember events happening before he reached Whittier, Mrs. Robins said he appears well and healthy in every way.

Enjoy "Friendly Chat."

"We had a pleasant, friendly chat but he did not recognize me," she said.

"Mr. Robins seems to have benefited from the rest he has been able to receive because of his being protected from unwelcome visitors.

"We spoke together only a few moments, but one could see that, aside from his inability to recall events beyond the time he reached Whittier, he is well and healthy in every way."

Dr. Griffin, who is in complete charge of the case, recommended the transfer to Appalachian hall, he said, because of the greater opportunity for activity Robins will have there.

Appalachian hall is surrounded by spacious grounds in which patients who are well enough may stroll or sit. It has specialized for many years in treatment of mental disorder.

Unable to Give Hope.

As yet Dr. Griffin has not been able to give members of the philanthropist's family any hope that he will regain his lost memory at an early date.

John Dreier of New York, a nephew, who identified Robins at Whittier, said Dr. Griffin had refused to make any prediction with respect to Robins' recovery.

In his only public statement, the physchiatrist explained it will be several days before he would attempt to diagnose the mental aberration from which Col. Robins is suffering.

Amnesia, he said, is a symptom, not a disease, and may be caused by any one of half a dozen things.

"His case is not of the usual type," Dr. Griffin was quoted as saying. "He recalls early features of his own personal history as Robins, but is under the impression, nevertheless, that he is 'Rogers.' It is not a common case. There is not any way at all of telling how long the condition will continue, or when it will clear."

Rest and Quiet Ordered.

Dr. Griffin said rest and quiet are essential to Robins' recovery and he emphasized his orders that no one except Mrs. Robins is to be allowed to visit or speak with the patient.

Robins has expressed a wish to be left alone, Griffin said.

Dr. Griffin said he had observed no change in his patient's condition.

Since his identification by Dreier and federal agents, acting on a tip supplied by a 13 year old Whittier boy, who noted a resemblance between the man who took him hiking on Sunday afternoons and a picture of the missing social worker he saw in a newspaper, Mr. Robins has stoutly denied that he is any one but "Reynolds Rogers," prospector, from "out Kentucky way."

Persons who saw the meeting between Robins and Dreier say that the 50 year old crusader told his nephew he was not Raymond Robins.

Insull Defies Swanson Aids; Rejects "Deal"

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 20.—Andrew J. Vlachos and Charles A. Bellows, assistant state's attorneys of Cook county, Illinois, arrived by boat today from Brindisi, Italy, and immediately requested an interview with Samuel Insull, fugitive Chicago utilities magnate. They sought to discuss the question of the possibility of Insull waiving extradition and returning to the United States voluntarily. Insull refused to discuss the question with them.

It is understood that the prosecutors will confer with Christos Ladas and Arthur Douglas Page, Insull's Greek and British lawyers, tomorrow. It was said that State's Attorney Swanson's assistants desire to arrange a deal with the Insull lawyers before the formal request for extradition and the presidential warrant arrive from the state department.

Carry Depositions of Evidence.

Vlachos and Bellows arrived here with brief cases stuffed with depositions of evidence on which a Cook county grand jury indicted Insull on the charges of embezzlement and larceny.

They appeared assured about Insull's eventual return. They have appointments as deputy United States marshals to bring him back.

They also said that the documents they possess will prove to the Athens court that the acts with which Insull is charged constitute a crime of embezzlement and larceny both under Greek and American law, thus meeting the line of defense it is understood that Insull's Greek lawyer will follow.

Insull had no comments to make tonight in his cozy room in the Arsiacion clinic regarding the prosecutors' hints that it would be better and more convenient in the long run to waive extradition.

Avoid Diplomatic Tangles.

The Chicago attorneys said that it would probably be necessary to take Insull back on either a Greek or American ship, as diplomatic tangles might arise if the ship touches ports of other nations.

"We cannot say how long the extradition proceedings will take," explained Bellows, "but we believe that once the papers have arrived and the matter is laid before the courts here, action will be speedy."

"It is nonsense to say that there is any politics behind Insull's arrest," Vlachos interposed. "The warrant was issued on the basis of an indictment by an Illinois grand jury. Insull is not a culprit until a definite sentence is passed upon him. We merely want him to come back like a man and clear up the charges against him."

CUTE GIRL GIVES SAM A SURPRISE ON HIS BIRTHDAY

Yesterday was Sam Gordon's 35th birthday, and he left his home at 2917 Fullerton avenue in a gay mood last evening to call for his girl friend to celebrate the occasion with her and other friends.

But another girl interfered. She was sitting in a parked automobile at Harrison street and Central Park avenue. She smiled as Sam passed, and beckoned to him.

"Have you a match, buddy?" she asked.

"Certainly," replied Sam, and he walked up to the car with a box of matches in his hand. Just then a man stepped behind Sam with a gun in his hand. He poked it into Sam's back, and forced him into the car as the pretty girl opened the door. A few blocks away they threw Sam out after taking $15 and a nice overcoat which had cost Sam $80.

"I hope you're not mad, cutie," consoled the pretty girl as she and her companion drove away. Sam told the police later that he wasn't mad, but his birthday party was spoiled.

ARNOLD YOUTH ADMITS KILLING GRANDMOTHER

Varecha Tells of His Crime Career.

CRIMES SOLVED

The confessions of two boys yesterday solved crimes which have startled the metropolitan district in the last week — the murder of a grandmother and the slaying of a motorist on the south side with the subsequent kidnaping and rape of the girl companion of a second motorist:

1. Bertram Arnold, 16 years old, captured last evening in Stockton, Ill., confessed that last Friday night he beat 60 year old Mrs. Ellen Saxe to death in their home in the western suburb of Riverside and flung her body into a cistern.
2. James Varecha, 17 years old, arrested on Saturday, confessed not only the murder of the motorist and the attack on the girl, but disclosed that he had shot seven other men and criminally assaulted another young woman in a career of banditry. Details on page 3.

Bertram Arnold, 16 years old, Riverside high school boy, whom authorities had sought for thirty-six hours as the slayer of Mrs. Ellen Saxe, retired educator of 60 years, was captured last night in western Illinois and confessed the killing.

Caught in a restaurant at Stockton, a village in Jo Daviess county 130 miles west of Chicago, the boy, who had been taught to regard Mrs. Saxe with all the respect of a grandson, confessed that in a moment of blind passion last Friday night he had struck her a fatal blow across the head. Then he dragged her body out the kitchen door of his Riverside home and lowered it into a cistern in the back yard, he said.

School Board Secretary.

The Arnold home is at 264 Shenstone road, Riverside. Mrs. Saxe, former secretary of the La Grange board of education, had come there only three weeks ago to live with her daughter, Mrs. Arnold, stepmother of young Bertram and mother of two other children of C. B. Arnold, well-to-do Chicago manufacturer, who is Bertram's father.

The boy signed his confession in the presence of Ralph Eaton, state's attorney of Carroll county, in the courthouse at the county seat, Mount Carroll, where he was taken after his arrest in Stockton. The western Illinois search for him had started in Mount Carroll, where he was recognized when he stayed in a hotel there Saturday night.

Tries to Borrow Car.

The killing was the result of Mrs. Saxe refusing the boy permission to drive her automobile to a dance at St. Paul's Episcopal church, according to Bert's formal confession.

"I came home that night and found grandmother there. I told her I wanted to use the car," he said. "She told me I could not use it. I said I would use it, no matter what she said. She got up from the chair where she was sitting and slapped me on the mouth.

"I seemed to go crazy all at once. I rushed into the kitchen, picked up a hammer from the table there, came back and struck her with it.

"She fell on the couch. I went out, got into the car and drove to the dance. All through the dance I worried about what I had done. I finally left, drove back to the house, found the body there and realized that she was dead.

"I got a length of cord, tied it around her and dragged her body to the cistern. Then I threw it in. I changed my clothes and went out again."

He also mentioned that on the way to the dance he picked up a couple of friends.

Brought Back to Riverside.

State's Attorney Eaton withheld the rest of the confession. Soon after midnight Assistant State's Attorneys Harry Ditchburne and Thomas Johnson of Cook county, who have been directing the murder investigation at Riverside, arrived in Mount Carroll. They took custody of Bert and after a brief parley started back to Riverside with him.

The party arrived at the Riverside police station at 4 o'clock this morning after a drive which averaged over 50 miles an hour all the way. Only two stops were made, one at Dixon, where Ditchburne telephoned Dr. Francis Gesty, superintendent of the psychopathic hospital, and Dr. H. Douglas Singer, alienist, to be on hand to meet them. No questions were asked of young Arnold during the trip.

There was a crowd of more than twenty-five persons, many of them residents of Riverside, when Arnold arrived. The youth was hatless and he appeared calm and unperturbed. To questioners he gave a monotonous reply: "I refuse to talk on advice of my counsel." This advice was given to him at Mount Carroll by John F. Devine, an attorney of Dixon, who had been retained by telephone by Arnold's father. Arnold sat in a corner of the station. Once he greeted a boy friend, Charles McMillen, with a cheery "hello."

Father and Mother Arrive.

Shortly before 5 o'clock Arnold's father and his stepmother, daughter of Mrs. Saxe, reached the station. They asked to see "our son." Police refused to allow them to do so, and the latter spoke with Prosecutor Ditchburne. It was expected that the parents and boy would be allowed to meet later.

The boy had donned an apron and was peeling potatoes in exchange for a bowl of soup in a Stockton lunchroom when Sheriff Jack Ehler of Jo Daviess county captured him. He admitted his identity without hesitance and accompanied the sheriff willingly to the village lockup to await the arrival of State's Attorney Eaton, who had first picked up his trail at Mount Carroll and warned the authorities of adjacent counties to be on the lookout.

Stockton lies twenty miles north of Mount Carroll. On the motor ride to the Carroll county seat, Bertram refused to talk for the first ten miles but, as Prosecutor Eaton and the Carroll county sheriff, Harry Shiley, pressed him to clear his conscience, he broke down.

"Aw, what's the use," he sobbed. "You've got me in your hands, and I suppose the men in Chicago have got the evidence. I might as well confess. Yes, I killed her."

Find Car Near Mount Carroll.

Capture of the boy followed discovery of Mrs. Saxe's car, in which Bertram fled from Riverside immediately after disposing of her body. He had driven it from Riverside to Mount Carroll, on Saturday, had stopped that night at the only inn in the town and apparently had planned to go on next day, hoping to reach his grandfather in Denver.

Prosecutor Eaton and a state game warden, Tom Johnson, found the machine. Recognized by the hotel clerk, Bert was being hunted over three counties when the prosecutor and the warden, driving north of Mount Carroll over state route 40, saw the top of a closed machine in a thicket just off the road five miles north of town.

The fuel tank was empty. The boy, in a desperate effort to cover his tracks, had pulled up two fence posts and pushed the machine over a ditch and across a spot where the fence wire had been flattened and into a clump of bushes. The prosecutor marveled at his strength and concluded it was a feat of desperation.

Find Note in Car.

A search of the car yielded evidence that the boy, in a fit of remorse, or in dread of capture, had scribbled a note calculated to exonerate himself and then had planned to commit suicide.

The evidence of suicidal intent was a strand of rope found in the rear seat, a piece off the coil he had used to lower Mrs. Saxe's body into the cistern. The rope was knotted in a noose, as if Bertram had planned to toss it over a limb and hang himself.

The note of exoneration, apparently intended to convey the impression that he was the victim of kidnapers, was written on a sheet of paper clipped to the dashboard. The jerky characters and the unfinished text gave evidence of the boy's intense distress at the moment of writing it. "Three men in a blue Buick—quick," was all it said.

Informed of his son's confession by telephone Mr. Arnold, president of the manufacturing concern of Seymour & Peck, exclaimed, "O, my God," then hung up the telephone. Within a few minutes he left the house, apparently to arrange for counsel to represent the boy. Shortly before midnight Attorney Devine and a Freeport lawyer demanded that State's Attorney Eaton formally charge the prisoner or release him in their custody. The demand was refused.

Arrives in Village.

Bert arrived in Mount Carroll at 5:30 p. m., Saturday night, apparently without funds. Hatless and wearing a blue suit and a leather jacket with a sheepskin lining, he entered the Glen View hotel on the square and asked the clerk, Floyd Gibbs, for a room.

"I haven't any money," he said hesitantly. "I came out here to visit some of my relatives, but they aren't home. I just called out at their house and the place was locked. If you'll let me have a room on credit, I'll pay you back tomorrow."

Gibbs, a son of the proprietor of the hotel, was sympathetic. Without even questioning the boy as to his relatives, he agreed to let him have a room. He handed his guest a fountain pen and Bert scrawled a name in a shaky hand.

"Norton Jonathan, 110 Main street, Aurora," was the name he wrote, and this was one of a chain of circumstances that betrayed his true identity. Learning of this signature the Riverside authorities established that no such person resided in Aurora and thus concluded that Bert had naively adopted as an alias the name of a school mate, Norton Jonathan of Berwyn.

Borrows 40 Cents from Clerk.

Having registered, the boy leaned upon the counter for five minutes, occasionally directing a hesitant glance at the clerk. Gibbs finally asked him if there was anything else he wanted.

"You know, I haven't any money," said the boy. "I wonder would you advance me enough to get a bite to eat. My folks will pay you in the morning."

Gibbs took 40 cents from his pocket, handed it to the boy, and watched him through the window as he entered a lunch room and spent 10 cents for coffee and doughnuts. From the restaurant, it was established later, he went to the village movie, paid the 30 cents admission, and returned to the hotel about 10 p. m., retiring immediately to his room.

Reads a Newspaper.

Young Gibbs was again on duty in the morning when Bert came downstairs at 10 a. m. Instead of starting out immediately to find his relatives, as the clerk expected, the boy found a chair beside the window and began reading the front page of a Clinton, Ia., newspaper, which carried a brief account of the murder of Mrs. Saxe.

Gibbs, meanwhile, had been reading a more extensive account of the murder in Chicago newspapers. He saw a photograph of the fugitive and, with a start, perceived the resemblance between the picture and the boy sitting across the counter ten feet away.

Gibbs was turning over in his mind a method of getting out of the hotel to call the sheriff without exciting his guest's suspicion, the while studying the boy's face closely, when Bert glanced narrowly around the corner of the newspaper, and perceived the clerk's suppressed excitement. With shaking hands he folded up the paper and arose.

"Doesn't seem to be much news this morning," he remarked with a poor attempt at nonchalance. "Guess I'll go down the street and find my relatives. They should be home now."

Crosses Courthouse Lawn.

Hunching his leather coat in an effort to seem jaunty, he left the hotel, Gibbs observing the quickening of his steps as he cut across the courthouse lawn in the middle of the square. He was lost to sight by the time Gibbs got the sheriff on the telephone.

Within fifteen minutes the sheriff was at the hotel and had Prosecutor Ditchburne on the wire, getting this description: "Charles Bertram Arnold, 16 years old, sixty-six inches tall, 129 pounds, dark complexion, brown eyes, slim build and sharp features; wearing a blue suit and leather jacket; driving a gray Chevrolet coach, license number 407-632. Bears a scar from knees to hip, result of a childhood scalding."

The sheriff called two of his deputies, Prosecutor Eaton, and Kurt Schmidt, editor of the Mount Carroll Daily, and the hunt was on.

Examining the time tables of the Milwaukee road, the searchers concluded the boy had not arrived by train, the last one from Chicago Saturday having passed through Mount Carroll four hours before he registered at the hotel. The hunt was then concentrated on the gray Chevrolet.

The prosecutor and the editor quickly covered all the village streets and the two garages, finding nothing. The search was then widened to all of Carroll county and to neighboring counties. The car was found about 4:30 p. m.

Meanwhile Prosecutor Ditchburne, working by telephone and telegraph from Riverside, had mobilized a search in other quarters. Still giving consideration to the theory of Bert's father that marauders had slain Mrs. Saxe and kidnaped the boy, Mr. Ditchburne requested Supt. Charles G. Sauers of the forest preserves to have his police beat through the 1,700 acres of timber adjacent to Riverside on a chance that Bert's body might be found.

The search was still in progress when word came of the capture of the boy at Stockton. Thereupon the forest preserve search was abandoned and Ditchburne and Johnson departed for Mount Carroll.

A spirit of disquiet seemed to spread over normally peaceful Riverside yesterday as the investigation progressed. The residents, mostly prosperous families with business and professional interests in Chicago, are of a class which ordinarily manifests slight interest in crime. But as they motored to church yesterday along the winding drives and terraced parkways, many of them stopped to stare at the big square house where Mrs. Saxe was killed and a few even trespassed on the lawn to gaze at the cover of the cistern.

The uneasiness was manifest at the Riverside Presbyterian church, where Bert was a member of the Sunday school class taught by Keith Evans.

"I had him in this class for five years," Mr. Evans declared after the service. "The worst I could say about him was that he was a little mischievous. I can't believe he did this thing."

DROPS DEAD IN SUBURBAN STATION.

Miss Christina Anderson, 60 years old, a cook in the home of Charles B. Stumes, 700 Fairview road, Glencoe, died yesterday of a heart attack as she entered the Church street station of the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee railroad in Evanston.

Bertram Arnold's Wild Boasts to His School Friends Believed a Clew to Murder Frenzy

Up to the moment that the body of his stepmother's mother was taken from the cistern at his home early on Saturday 16 year old Bertram Arnold had been only another high school boy to Riverside. While he was confessing the murder of Mrs. Ellen Saxe to Carroll county authorities at Mount Carroll last night agents of the law in Cook county scrutinized his past for light on the psychology that caused him to strike down in a murderous frenzy the elderly woman for whom he had seemed to cherish a warm affection.

It was not easy to find. For out of the patchwork of facts emerging bit by bit as the investigators interviewed residents of the suburb and relatives, the pattern of the mental attitude behind the crime emerged only dimly. Bert Arnold's apparently normal boyhood was obscured gradually in the haze of fragmentary information that indicated how his sudden deviation from routine to murder may have happened.

An Average Boy.

All the investigators could gather at first from the alert young crowd, of which the boy had been a part, was that this particular youth was no better and no worse than the average. That he had been in no way conspicuous in his group, who drank a little, smoked a lot, gambled now and then, made fair grades in school, and enjoyed sports and numerous social activities, but were a long way from exhibiting any vicious tendencies.

There were no clews to be found in his private domain, his own room, to contradict this evidence, with the exception of a pistol that is not connected with the murder. This room in the three story frame home at 264 Shenstone road had a collegiate atmosphere—pennants on the walls, a few snapshots of boy and girl friends, a diary kept by card index, and a guest book with more than a score of names. There was also a collection of sketches for radio sets demonstrating that young Arnold was a follower of this science. And there was a small amount of hard liquor in a bottle.

Shines on Dance Floor.

Bert had not been an active participant in sports, the investigators learned. He was not what would have been termed a two-fisted boy. He was to be found on the rooter's bench rather than the field. But he shone in the dance hall, where his graceful dancing made him a preferred partner with the girls. He leaned, it was said, a bit toward the effeminate.

At home the boy was subject, the investigators learned, to strict discipline by his father, C. B. Arnold, head of Seymour & Peck, wooden container manufacturers at 917 West 20th place, Chicago. He received an allowance of a dollar a week, and his comings and goings were kept rigidly to a close schedule, dictated by his father.

Perhaps in rebellion against this situation, he frequently boasted about the freedom permitted him and the leeway allowed him in money matters. For the last several days he had informed various boys that his parents were going to Denver, and had arranged to leave him a checking account of $100 and the family sedan in their absence.

Repeats His Boast.

One theory of the chain of circumstance that led to the tragedy has its inception in this story. It is possible, the investigators believe, that the twitting of his pals, who candidly disbelieved the yarn, led Bert to emphatic reiteration of the tale. They know that he declared repeatedly and with heat:

"I'll show you whether it's true or not. I'll have the car for the dance Friday night, and I'll have a hundred dollars by next Wednesday."

When Friday night came, he had the car. His confession showed that it was his determination to take the car that led to the murder of Mrs. Saxe.

HUGH WILLIS OF HERRIN MINE RIOT FAME KILLS SELF

Hugh A. Willis, a former leader in the southern Illinois coal fields, who was charged with being the man who ordered the start of the firing in the Herrin massacre in 1922, shot and killed himself last night in his room at the Broadview hotel at East St. Louis, Ill. He lived in Chicago at 7720 Marquette avenue with his wife, Mrs. Delia Willis, and two children, Delaina, 17 years old, and Hugh Jr., 15 years old. He was 50 years old.

Mrs. Willis was notified of her husband's death. She said that he left home for East St. Louis last Tuesday night and was in good spirits at the time. He was connected with the Illinois industrial commission, she said, and worked on cases involving workmen's compensation.

Willis was tried with a group of other men for the Herrin slayings and was acquitted. He denied giving any orders to shoot as was testified by witnesses. At the time he was a state board member of the Illinois Mine Workers' union.

KILLER BANDIT CONFESSES AS HIS ALIBI FAILS

Varecha Boasts of Shooting and Robbery.

James "Iggy" Varecha, 17 years old, broke down at the detective bureau yesterday, after his alibi had been destroyed by his own sister, and confessed the murder last Wednesday night of Frank F. Jordan, a salesman, and the subsequent kidnaping and rape of Miss Lillian Henry, niece of Deputy Police Commissioner John H. Alcock.

Varecha, an escaped inmate of a home for mental defectives, referred repeatedly in his confession to his mental condition, but his claims to insanity were given a blow by two alienists who were present through out his examination. The alienists, Dr. H. Douglas Singer and Dr. Harry H. Hoffman, director of the Criminal court behavior clinic, asserted that Varecha not only is sane but that he is as cunning a criminal as they have observed in a long time.

Confesses Other Shootings.

Varecha did not confine his confession to the crimes which brought about his arrest. He disclosed a career of banditry and hoodlumism which included the shooting of two other men in the commission of a robbery and an attempted burglary, the shooting of five Mexicans in street brawls in the New City police district, a number of holdups, and the kidnaping and rape of another young woman.

Vercha said in his confession that he had boasted to Miss Henry during her captivity that he had shot an elderly man in a holdup after the latter had wounded his Varecha's, partner. "I really didn't shoot any old man," said Varecha. "I was just bragging."

Cermak Aids in Questioning.

The killer bandit, after making his confession, balked for hours at signing it. He was finally persuaded to attach his signature to the statement by Mayor Cermak and other officials. The mayor was at the detective bureau for four hours, helping in the questioning of Varecha. Varecha obviously enjoyed his own importance, as reflected by the presence of the mayor, and exhibited an air of bravado throughout. The confession filled forty-five pages.

Varecha was captured Saturday afternoon in a South State street burlesque house, after he had boasted to a man sitting beside him that he was the object of the man hunt organized after the murder of Jordan and the attack upon Miss Henry. Taken to the detective bureau, he denied his identity until it was established by fingerprints, and even then denied the crimes in the face of identifications by several of his victims.

3 Victims Identify Killer.

He was first taken to the home of Miss Henry at 5720 South Lincoln street. Although Deputy Alcock maintained afterward that his niece was too ill to identify any one, it was learned later that she had identified Varecha from her bed as the man who attacked her. Later, at the detective bureau, he was identified by Miss Emma Dahnke, 162 West 74th street, who was with Jordan when the latter resisted Varecha's attempt to rob them Wednesday night and was shot to death.

Miss Henry's companion, James Guisinger, 6006 South Kolmar avenue, whom Varecha bound and gagged and bundled in the rumble seat of his own automobile when he kidnaped Miss Henry, a few minutes after the Jordan killing, also appeared at the bureau and identified the prisoner. Still Varecha maintained his innocence.

"Anyway, the doctors all say I'm crazy," he said repeatedly.

Own Sister Spoils Alibi.

He maintained that he spent Wednesday evening in the home of his sister, Mrs. Mary Minski, 2734 Warren avenue, and had gone to bed at 9 p. m. Mrs. Minski told police she had left the house at 9 o'clock that evening and that her brother was not there then. Informed of this, Varecha asserted that he had arrived at her home a few minutes after she left. His brother-in-law, Harry Minski, exploded that claim. "Iggy" hadn't been at the house all night, he said.

Then Mrs. Min[illegible] said that she had seen a .32 caliber automatic pistol, the weapon used to kill Jordan, in her brother's possession on Tuesday night. Varecha was informed of this.

"You bring her in here," the suspect said, "and if she tells me that I'll tell the truth."

Mrs. Minski was led in.

Sister Repeats Gun Charge.

"Did you see your brother, Jimmy, with an automatic pistol the day before Jordan was killed?" asked Assistant State's Attorney Walker Butler.

"Yes, sir," she replied. Then she broke down and was led from the room, sobbing.

"What do you offer me for a break?" began the youth, attempting to bargain with Chief of Detectives Schoemaker.

"Not a thing," replied Chief Schoemaker. "We don't need your confession. We've got enough identifications now to send you to the chair."

"The jig's up," said Verecha. "I'll tell everything. Let me tell it in my own way."

It was then after 2 a. m. A stenographer was called and for four hours Varecha talked. Besides Chief Schoemaker, Mr. Butler and the two alienists, those who heard him confess were Deputy Commissioner Alcock, Capt. John Egan of the Chicago Lawn district, where the murder and rape were committed; Assistant State's Attorney Frank S. Sims and Lieut. William Bush, whose squad arrested Varecha.

"Last Wednesday I was out around 64th and Lincoln streets," the prisoner began. "I was looking for somebody that I could stick up. I saw a car standing there, close by, and I said: 'This is gravy.' I walked over and opened the door where the girl [Miss Dahnke] was sitting. I had my gun out. I opened the door with my left hand and held the gun in my right. I said, 'Stick 'em up!'

Says Woman Spoiled Aim.

"This fellow, now I know it was Jordan, said: 'The hell it is.' I said to the girl: 'Give me that pocketbook.' This fellow, Jordan, said: 'Don't give it to him.' He made a move to get out of the car and I thought he was going for a gun.

"I aimed to shoot him in the shoulder, when the girl raised her pocketbook and knocked my aim off and I hit him in the neck.

"I ran down a passageway and when I got a few blocks away I saw a squad car coming. There was a car with another couple there, and I got in there to get out of the way.

"I said, 'This is a robbery. Don't make a move. I just shot a fellow accidentally, and I don't want to shoot any more.' I took their handkerchiefs and blindfolded this fellow Guisinger. I ripped the collar off the girl's dress and tied up his hands, and I put him in the back of the car in the rumble seat."

Varecha then told how he had attacked Miss Henry, in spite of her pleading with him.

Denies Second Attack on Girl.

"Then I said to her," he continued. "'That's a pretty good fellow you've got in the rear there. He does what he's told. Where does he live?' She told me, and I drove him home and pushed him out. Then I drove the girl away and told her I was going to attack her again. She pleaded and begged with me and said, 'Think of your own sister.' I didn't attack her the second time. I told the couple I had just got out of Pontiac and boasted quite a bit to scare them.

"Then I got out of the car near my house. I got home at 5 a. m. and at 11 I got up and sent my sister out for the papers. I read the story, and it was the first time I knew that a man had been killed.

"That afternoon, about 2 o'clock, my brother Frank said to me, 'You answer the description of this guy.' I told him, 'Say nothing about it.' I told him to come down in the basement and get a hammer. I broke up the gun and gave it to Frank to take out and bury some place.

"Then I went to my sister's home on Hoyne avenue. I stayed there and changed clothes and borrowed $14 from her. Thursday night I stayed at the Marco hotel, downtown. Friday night I stopped at a skate house [cheap lodging house] at Harrison and State. I paid 25 cents for a room."

The officials, who had been listening to him, rose to leave the room. Saying, "Wait a minute, I'll tell you some more," Varecha detained them. He started a history of his boyhood and his earlier crimes.

"When I was going to grammar school I broke a window," he said. "They wanted me to pay for it, and I got kicked out of school. I went to six grammar schools before I graduated. I was kicked out of all of them for petty things like that. The doctors say I am crazy. They better stand up on that or they'll lose their jobs.

Boasts of Other Crimes.

"Out in the New City district, I shot five Mexicans. They all smoked marijuana [narcotic cigarets] and ran down the street with knives. I remember one night a Mexican tried to rape a white girl in a gangway. I went in. He pulled a knife, and I shot him.

"Wait a minute [as members of his audience started to leave again]. I'll tell you some more. I shot McElligott two night ago. Gee, he was a tough Irishman. I don't want to run into those kind of fellows any more. I raped another girl on Aug. 31. She was riding with a fellow named Chester Kucharski. That was out in the New City district.

"Wait a minute. I shot another fellow named Peich. I'm glad it's all over. I'm glad it's all over."

That finished Varecha's confession. It was daybreak. He ate a few bites of a sandwich and then lay down on the bench in a cell, with a policeman watching him. He fell off to sleep in a few minutes. Yesterday afternoon he was taken before the afternoon showup at the bureau.

There two robbery victims identified him. Both crimes took place on Oct. 31. Mrs. Geraldine Jarek, 5600 South Whipple street, said she and her husband were held up by Varecha in their automobile as they were leaving the home of friends at 5342 South Spalding avenue.

"He rode with us for 20 minutes. I was holding our baby, Joan, 2 years old, in my arms. He complained that business was tough because nobody had any money and said to me, 'If it wasn't for that baby I'd kill you right here.' He took 80 cents and his watch from my husband."

The other victim was Glenn Ramsey, 6341 South Western avenue, who was robbed of $10 the same evening at 64th street and Claremont avenue.

The two alienists who heard his confession pointed out Varecha's attempts to excite sympathy, and his frequent protestations that he is mentally unbalanced, as proof that the prisoner is in fact both sane and cunning.

"He's not crazy," said Drs. Singer and Hoffman. "If anything he's extra bright. He certainly isn't feeble minded or suffering from any mental disease."

Verify Confessions.

Police were able to verify Varecha's confessions of a number of his earlier crimes. James T. McElligott, 642 East avenue, Oak Park, was shot last Monday night when he resisted the attempt of a bandit, now known to be Varecha, to hold up McElligott and a young woman in McElligott's car at 65th street and Mozart avenue. McElligott was wounded in the shoulder.

Joseph Peich, 2238 West 50th street, was shot in the right leg on the night of Aug. 31 when he pursued a burglar whom he had caught breaking into a neighbor's home. The robbery of Chester Kucharswi, a nephew of Felix Kucharski, a Republican ward committeeman, took place the same night. Kucharski was accompanied by a young woman, but no report of an attack upon her was made to the police.

Records at the New City station showed that four Mexicans were shot in that district last May and June. These are believed to have been among Varecha's victims. Later in June he was arrested and committed to the state hospital at Dixon by Judge Mary Bartelme in the Juvenile court. He escaped from there twice, the second time in August.

Order Brother Arrested.

As a result of Varecha's confession, police ordered his brother, Frank, taken in custody again. Frank, who was detained for a time Thursday and then released, said that he had not seen his brother since his last escape from Dixon, in August. James' confession, however, implicated Frank in the destruction of the pistol used to kill Jordan.

Varecha adopted an air of bravado after his confession. When photographers took his picture, he suggested that they take one of him lighting a cigaret, "to show how cool I am."

He indicated that he may plead guilty when he is arraigned in court, adding:

"I'm crazy. They can't do anything to me. If they don't believe I'm crazy, let them go down to Dixon. They know down there that I'm crazy."

ROOSEVELT GOES TO CHURCH WITH 2 TITLED GUESTS

Mother and Wife Also in Family Pew.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 20.—[Special.]—The President elect, Franklin D. Roosevelt, worshiped today in the old church of his father, a vine clad stone chapel standing since 1811 on the Albany post road, about a mile north of this home village of the Roosevelts.

The President elect, with his mother and his wife, and with his guests, Lord and Lady Astor, sat in the Roosevelt pew, No. 40, far down front, and the casual worshiper in that church, had he not recognized any of those five, might have thought them undifferent from any of the others, for no notice was paid to them by the rector, or by the other church goers present.

On the inside of the wall of this ancient St. James Episcopal church, hanging beside the Roosevelt pew, is a tablet bearing the names of the earlier Roosevelts who were members of the church, far back to the days of the American revolution.

Ogden Millses Parishioners.

The Roosevelts are not the only distinguished patrons of this parish. Other famous families whose estates line the shores of the Hudson hereabouts worship at St. James', and among the other parishioners are the Ogden Millses, the Vanderbilts, the Archibald Rogerses, and the Lydig Hoyts.

Franklin Roosevelt, who was baptized in the hallowed edifice, sat quietly as the Rev. Frank Wilson preached his sermon. Although this is the first Sunday that Roosevelt has attended service here since his election, Dr. Wilson made no reference to his presence. Not even in his prayer did he beseech divine guidance for the future chief executive of the nation.

The preacher took for his text the sixteenth verse of the tenth chapter of St. Matthew, quoting from the words of Jesus: "Behold I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents and harmless as doves."

Acknowledges Messages.

Gov. Roosevelt spent most of today, outside of his religious observances and his visiting with the Astors and with the Hamilton Fish Armstrongs, who were also visitors at Krum Elbow honse, in signing acknowledgments of the thousands of congratulatory messages which deluged him after the election.

The governor will motor tomorrow down to New York, where, in the evening he will confer with Lieut. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, who will act as governor during Mr. Roosevelt's sojourn in Warm Springs, Ga., for the next fortnight.

Mr. Roosevelt also plans while in New York, and prior to his departure for Washington Tuesday morning at ten o'clock, to go over the final details of preparation for his conference with President Hoover Tuesday afternoon. He will confer with his chief advisor, Col. Louis McHenry Howe, and with his economy counsellor, Prof. Raymond Moley, at his New York house.

INDIAN MOSLEMS SPURN COMMUNAL ELECTORAL PACT

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 20.—(AP)—A joint meeting of the all-India Moslem conference and the Moslem league today summarily rejected proposals adopted at a Hindu-Moslem conference at Allahabad last Friday for settlement of communal representation in proposed electoral reforms.

The Indian round table conference, now in session in London, received a cable last week from Pandit Malaviya, Hindu champion of the untouchables, stating that a final settlement had been reached between Moslem and Hindu factions, but that it was premised on granting of home rule to India.

Fantail Beats Pigmy Pigeon at Show Strutting

Eileen Crowe, 5261 Flournoy street, has more success getting the white fantail to strut than Ruth Bostrom, 440 Barry place, has with a black pigmy pigeon. These birds are part of the exhibits for the annual Chicago Coliseum poultry show which opens tomorrow. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Opens Tomorrow

Aristocrats of the poultry world will be placed in their cages by the thousand today in preparation for the annual Chicago Coliseum poultry exposition which opens tomorrow. The show will continue until next Sunday.

More than 4,000 entries will fill the Coliseum, according to Manager Harvey Wood. The entries come from 20 states and from Canada and comprise every standard breed of chickens, turkeys, ducks and geese as well as waterfowl, pigeons, rabbits, and cavies.

Under the auspices of the Institute of American Poultry Industries, housewives visiting the poultry exposition will be shown how science determines good quality in poultry products such as dressed poultry and eggs.

A three legged hen, a four legged duck, chickens covered with a silky fur instead of feathers and other chickens with topknots resembling chrysanthemum blossoms, will be among the exhibits.

Competition open to the world is expected to bring more than 800 pigeons to the exposition where the Chicago Pigeon club will hold its 24th annual show. The Chicago Rabbit and Cavy Breeders' association is another of the 16 specialty clubs which are to hold their annual exhibits in conjunction with the exposition.

The medal of honor of the Order of the Purple Heart was presented yesterday to Lieut. LeRoy J. Knox, colored, at a special service in the Beth Eden Baptist church, 11121 Loomis street. The order was conferred on Lieut. Knox by order of the United States war department and the presentation was held under the auspices of the Military Order of Guards of the army. The medal was presented by Gen. Frank Stewart and the address was delivered by Gen. M. C. Saxton.

The Order of the Purple Heart was established by George Washington during the revolutionary war. It was recently revived by President Hoover. The award is given to persons who, while in military servide, performed "any singularly meritorious act of extraordinary fidelity or essential service."

INDIAN LEADER SAYS ENGLAND SHOULD PAY U. S.

England should pay her war debts to the United States, V. J. Patel, former mayor of Bombay, India, declared yesterday before the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic at the Hotel Sherman. Attorney Clarence Darrow also spoke, and Police Captain Dennis Malloy acted as chairman.

Mr. Patel, who is one of the leaders of the movement for free government in India, in discussing the war debt question also said that all the international settlements should be made with finality after an examination of the facts by an impartial tribunal.

"The United States should take the lead in such a movement and demand that the question be settled once and for all," he said. "All of the nations in the world are looking to America for guidance. So far as England is concerned, she should not be allowed to settle her debts piecemeal."

YOUTH IN STOLEN AUTO WOUNDED IN POLICE CHASE

George Hickey, 15 years old, 2850 West Van Buren street, was shot in the chest and critically wounded yesterday by an Oak Park police squad after a pursuit of more than a mile in Oak Park streets. Hickey was riding in a stolen car with Emmett Stokes, 17 years old, 1447 South Kenneth avenue, and Harry Britton, 17 years old, 21 South Whipple street.

The car had been stolen from Homan and North avenues, where it was parked. The owner, Rose Zasabil, 2120 South Wesley avenue, Berwyn, had loaned it to a couple who were being married in the Graemere hotel, 113 North Homan avenue.

Oak Park Policemen Royland Wilcox and Dane Stanton in a squad car were suspicious of the three youths in the automobile and ordered them to stop. The youths fled. The policemen fired more than a dozen shots before they overtook the car. Hickey was taken to the Bridewell hospital. His companions confessed and were turned over to the Fillmore street police.

GOVERNOR LAUDS HAWAII; OPPOSES CHANGE IN RULE

Says Critics Moved by Unfair Motives.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 20.—[Special.]—A vigorous defense of criminal and moral conditions in Hawaii and an equally vigorous protest against proposed curtailment of the territory's privileges of self-government were voiced today by Gov. Lawrence M. Judd in his annual report to Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur.

Referring specifically to the now notorious Massie rape case of last fall, Gov. Judd asserted that Hawaii "has been made the victim of an unfortunate occurrence" and attacked "certain factions of the mainland press" for circulating "greatly exaggerated and untrue reports of conditions here."

Gov. Judd declared that "no greater disaster could befall any part of our country" than the program or procedure contemplated in several bills introduced in the last session of congress which would diminish the power of self-government now enjoyed by the island territory.

"There is nothing in the past or in the immediate history of Hawaii," he said, "to justify such an overthrow of traditional and universally recognized sound principles of government as is proposed in these bills."

Seeks Care for Wounds; Identified as a Bandit

Stephen O'Don, 20 years old, 1143 West 16th street, who appeared in the Mercy hospital Saturday night seeking treatment for bullet wounds in shoulder and hand, was identified yesterday by Frank Kotula, baker at 1905 South Loomis street, as the man who attempted to rob him. Kotula fired two shots at the bandit, who fled after firing several wild shots in return. O'Don told Sergt. Harry O'Connell of the Maxwell street police he received the wounds in a quarrel over a dice game.

BEAUTY SHOPS WILL ARBITRATE TO END STRIFE

New services, including the establishment of minimum rates, are in sight in many Chicago beauty culture and hairdressing shops, it was announced last night.

Eight neighborhood shop owners' organizations, the Illinois Beauty Shop Owners' association, and the Institute of Certified Beauticians have jointly requested that Allen Bennett Forsberg, economist, arbitrate the differences in the beauty shop industry and recommend minimum prices for service. Mr. Forsberg's decision, it was announced, would do much to end three years of price wars and other difficulties in the industry.

The Institute of Certified Beauticians was organized Sept. 7 at a meeting conducted by Mr. Forsberg. He is an associate of Dr. Benjamin M. Squires, until recently the virtual dictator of the Chicago cleaning and dyeing industry.

JAPS STAND PAT; LEAGUE FACES GREATEST TEST

Tokio Refutes Geneva's Report on Manchuria.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Nov. 20.—The council of the league of nations meets tomorrow to consider the report of its commission of inquiry on Manchuria.

It is the league's greatest test and nobody relishes it. The powers most reluctant to enforce the covenant in this case have become markedly disinterested since the war debt issue came up. It seems that if the United States is to win support on its Manchurian policy of refusal to recognize states which are the fruit of aggression, it may have to offer something in the way of debt settlement.

The league's commission, headed by the earl of Lytton, was appointed by the five big powers of the league and they will be hard put to disavow its findings. The smiling Japanese are here with a large delegation replete with paid American advisers.

Japanese Refute Report.

Today they issued Japan's reply to the Lytton report and flatly refuted it. Japan smilingly stands pat. The feeling here that this delegation smiles with a pistol held to its head by Japan's military clique does not make things any more simple for the league.

The Chinese are here, also surrounded with paid American advisers. They are insisting on their rights and, moreover, that the league save itself. The league is passing on its own fact finding commission's facts. Even among the powers generally reluctant the mood is to pass on the first eight chapters of the report as quickly as possible. Japan will oppose this. Unanimity holds in the council, but not the assembly, nor the assembly's commission of nineteen to which the report must still inevitably go.

The first eight chapters constitute a condemnation of Japan. These are followed by recommendations for solution. The big powers feel that if the United States is conspicuously standing aside now she is anxious to sit in at the solution. The feeling here is that the solution might be allowed to drag. Other matters are being allowed to drag, a spokesman for one of these powers said tonight, obviously meaning debts.

Dismiss Commission's Findings.

In forty pages of observations, the Japanese first dismiss the Lytton report. They said in their reply that it was a conscientious but hasty and imperfect performance based on evidence the sources of which were in many cases suspicious if not unreliable.

After dismissing the report, they refute it, contesting the historical aspects of the case right down the line as they were presented in the first eight chapters, and then the conclusion.

Hopes of peace and unity in China held out by the nine power Washington conference in 1922 have been deceived, the Japanese exclaimed. China is in a state of national disintegration and communism is rampant. Japan has suffered most from the anti-foreign agitation. Japan has never exceeded the limits of self-defense.

Japan has done what any other power would have done in her situation. Japan has never broken any treaty even by recognizing the new state of Manchukuo. Manchuria has always been separate from China.

Asks General Recognition.

Japan agrees with the commission only in the statement that the restoration of the status quo ante is impossible. Her reply goes on to say that "it cannot be a commendable policy to ignore the existence of Manchukuo and leave that state devoid of international intercourse. General recognition is the only solution that can bring peace in the far east.

Even though the recognition of Manchukuo, as the Lytton commission predicted, invalidated the commission's suggestions to the council for a solution of the problem based on mutual interest, the Japanese refute the solution. They say it is "too refined and intricate" for the far east. Demilitarization is not adapted to realities and would be a source of anxiety to Japan, they say. International control, unless extended to all China, would be impractical.

The observations end with a series of questions of which two are:

"Would it not be better statesmanship to work for the stabilization of conditions in Manchuria? Why cannot the world, which has shown such patience with China, show patience with Manchukuo?"

The observations are interworded with acrid remarks such as: "The presence of foreign troops in countries on other continents has been no bar to recognition of independence."

Japan Defies League.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Nov. 21 [Monday].—Japanese government spokesmen today announced in plain words that Japan intends to maintain the status quo in Manchuria no matter what ultimate action the league of nations may take.

"We have tried our best to explain the legality of Japan's actions," said Count Yasuya Uchida, foreign minister. "We have done evrything to make it possible for the world to understand our position. The world must realize that Manchukuo is an established fact and is daily growing into a full fledged nation.

"I feel that if the world sincerely wishes to contribute to a settling of the far eastern situation and bring tranquillity here and thus help in the maintenance of world peace, it cannot but recognize this fact. Japan cannot and will not under any circumstances cancel her recognition of Manchukuo."

The war office in an unofficial statement said:

"If the league fails to understand Japan's position in the far east, Japan is firmly determined to push straight toward her aim, regardless of what happens.

"The Manchurian problem is settled as far as Japan and Manchuria are concerned. The question which remains is how to lead the league to formal recognition of Manchukuo. Indifference of the league to this problem will mean a crisis in the far east as well as for the league."

SEIZE 2 YOUTHS FOR THREATS TO HOLDUP VICTIM

Two youths were arrested yesterday by Sergt. Michael McCarthy and his squad after they are alleged to have warned a holdup victim not to prosecute a third youth who had been wounded during the robbery.

The pair are Stanley Zebrowski, 18 years old, of 5219 South May street, and John Rosewicki, also 18, of 5016 Aberdeen street. The robbery victim is John Daniel, owner of a meat market at 2100 West 50th place.

Late Saturday night four men held up Daniel and got $25. As they fled, John Soupak, a helper in the store, fired at them. Later Edward Pierucci, 21, of 5210 Lowe avenue, applied at a hospital for treatment of a wound in the back. He was identified by Daniel and Soupak.

Yesterday, police said, Zebrowski and Rosewicki visited Daniel and threatened him with harm if he prosecuted and then proposed to "fix" the case.

Sergt. McCarthy then went to 5219 South May street where he arrested four more youths, two of whom were identified by Daniel and Soupak as the other two bandits.

CHINESE REBELS AND MUTINIES HARASS JAPAN

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Nov. 20.—(AP)—While the league of nations was preparing today to resume debate on the Manchurian question, the Japanese position in this territory was becoming increasingly difficult. The most serious situation today was in the northwest, where insurgents have established their own government in opposition to the Japanese-sponsored Manchukuo régime.

Gen. Su Ping-Wen, holding forth at Manchulia, near the soviet border, has bluntly refused to negotiate for the release of his 245 Japanese captives. Japanese troops and air forces are flowing northward, preparing to attack Gen. Su's well armed forces.

Gen. Nobuyoshi Muto, the Japanese commander, has indicated it may be necessary to sacrifice Gen. Su's hostages in order to crush the rebellion. Besides mutinies in the Manchukuo army, the Japanese are also confronted with rebellion by part of the Manchukuo navy on the upper Sungari.

ASSEMBLY TEST ON RELIEF BONDS IS SET FOR TODAY

Fate of $17,000,000 Issue Is at Stake.

An important test vote is expected in the Illinois house of representatives late today on the Igoe bill—backed by Democratic leaders—for a $17,000,000 Cook county bond issue to tide the poor over until the next general assembly can act on charity relief in January.

The bill will probably be called on third reading shortly after both houses convene at 4 p. m. Mayor Cermak will depart for Springfield this morning to urge its passage. Last week the opposition to the nonreferendum bond issue was led by Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg [Rep., Chicago], who objected to the 4 cent increase in the tax rate which it would necessitate. No test was made to show how many of the Republicans agreed with him, but the Democrats, who had almost a full attendance on their side of the house, seemed united in favor of the bill.

Expect Visit from Horner.

Perhaps by the time the bill is called the state capitol may also be experiencing its first post-election visit from the new governor elect, Judge Henry Horner, who is to drive from French Lick today to confer with Gov. Emmerson on the new state budget. Weather conditions may prevent his arrival before the early evening, however.

Judge Horner expects to spend some time tonight at the executive mansion with Mr. Emmerson, but it is not expected that the two will complete their conference until some time tomorrow. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., president of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, who also favors the charity bond issue, may also talk with the governor elect.

An Informal Meeting.

Gov. Emmerson invited his successor to the conference to look over departmental budgets now being prepared for the next biennium. The judge will not stay at the executive mansion, although invited to do so, as he desires to make the meeting as informal as possible. He and Gov. Emmerson have been friends for years.

It was noted by observers in French Lick that the governor elect shipped his formal clothes back to Chicago when he prepared to leave the Indiana spa.

At the same time it is expected that the judge will also decide on his inauguration ceremonies early in January. There is a possibility that the inaugural ball will be dispensed with.

NEW YORK SPENDS OVER 48 MILLIONS FOR RELIEF WORK

New York, Nov. 20.—[Special.]—A report prepared for presentation to Gov. Roosevelt and the legislature by the state temporary emergency relief administration and made public today shows that $48,696,595 was spent by the state and local communities for work and home relief during the ten months between Nov. 1, 1931, and Sept. 1, 1932.

Of this sum the state's share represented about 50 per cent. The amount expended, representing the combined appropriations of the state and local governments, amounted to $3.95 per capita of the total population of the districts giving relief.

More than 95 per cent of public relief was distributed to family groups.

PERU SMASHES COLOMBIAN FLEET IN BOUNDARY ROW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PERNAMBUCO, Brazil, Nov. 11.—[By Air Mail.]—Col. Oscar Ordonez, Peruvian commander in the town of Leticia, which was seized recently from Colombia, informed Brazilian authorities in the nearby town of Tabatinga that the Peruvian monitor America had sunk the Colombian gunboat Cartagena and captured the latter's sister ship, the Santa Marta. The battle occurred on the Putumayo river.

Four Peruvian ships and an airplane attacked the Colombians, who offered little resistance. The Cartagena and Santa Marta were bought in England two years ago to patrol the [illegible] of territory awarded to Colombia by the Salomon-Lozano treaty. Colombia now has only one ship on the Putumayo, an auxiliary cruiser.

Brazil, concerned over the hostilities on the Putumayo, at once ordered the destroyer Floriano to lead a small Amazon squadron up the river to Tabatinga, across the line from Leticia.

WELFARE FUND DRIVE LAGS; NEW APPEAL ISSUED

Care of Aged, Infants and Sick at Stake.

A special appeal to the public and the 5,335 workers engaged in the public drive of the Emergency Welfare Fund of Cook County, Inc., was issued yesterday by Robert A. Gardner, general campaign chairman. The public drive is entering its second week today with two-thirds of the $7,500,000 fund still to be raised, he pointed out.

Subscriptions totaling $2,130,453 have been raised up to the present, largely through the preliminary gifts division from private individuals and corporations, Mr. Gardner said. The fund is being raised to support Cook county's organized charities and will be spent for welfare work other than relief for the idle.

"We must impress upon the public and every worker in this campaign," Mr. Gardner declared, "the absolute necessity of realizing the full quota of the fund, unless Chicago is to permit its helpless children to starve, its aged to be left destitute on the streets, and its families, hampered by sickness, to disintegrate."

The second of the biweekly luncheons, at which reports of progress in the public drive are to be made, will be held at the La Salle hotel at noon today, Mr. Gardner said. The women's organization, under the chairmanship of Mrs. William L. Hodgkins, is planning to begin the solicitation of all stores and offices outside of the loop district.

Jean Arthur of Hollywood Sued by Booking Agent

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 20.—[Special.]—Jean Arthur, actress brought back to Hollywood from the New York stage last week, is sued for $436 alleged to be due as a ten per cent commission for booking her for a prior film contract of $4,367.20. The plaintiff is Maurice Revnes, a movie booking agent.

SCHOOL PARLEY TO DEBATE FATE OF 10 BUILDINGS

Construction Stopped Early in Year.

The fate of ten new school buildings in various stages of construction will be debated today at the first of a series of conferences on the 1933 budget.

Work on the structures was halted early in the year and the school board left the projects without funds when it trimmed $15,000,000 from its 1932 budget last summer.

The discussions will be held by John Howatt, school engineer; Frank P. Sullivan, director of educational expenditures; C. J. Lamb, director of the division of repairs, and Robert Digges, assistant to L. E. Myers, president of the board of education.

William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, revealed that the appropriation to be asked for free textbooks in next year's budget will be approximately $1,000,000. In the tentative 1932 budget the amount asked for this purpose was $1,474,242, but this was reduced to $847,438 in the adopted budget.

LAST OF GARNER'S 'REAL POKER' AT JOE CANNON'S

Temple, Tex., Nov. 20.—(AP)—John Nance Garner, Vice President elect, aboard a train en route for Washington today, told newspaper men he had not played "a real game of poker for 15 years."

"The last real game I was in," he related, "Joe Cannon lived across the street in Washington and invited me over. We played nearly all night.

"Etta [Mrs. Garner] said the next day I couldn't keep my health and do my work if I kept it up and I decided she was right. That was my last real game."

The speaker of the house and Mrs. Garner boarded the train at San Antonio, Tex. They had motored there from Uvalde.

HITLER PREPARES PLANS; HOPES TO BE CHANCELLOR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—Adolf Hitler, National Socialist leader, met with republican chieftains today to outline a unified program which will meet the requirements of President von Hindenburg for a government of national concentration.

From influential industrialist circles came the forecast that Hitler would succeed Franz von Papen as chancellor this week, regardless of opposition. Von Hindenburg let it be known yesterday that Hitler would be acceptable under his own conditions. The two men will meet again tomorrow.

Wilhelmstrasse was upset by reports that Premier Edouard Herriot of France blames agitation by German elements for the attempt today to blow up a train on which he was riding near Nantes. It is also worried by reports that the United States will insist on payments of war debt installments due from France and Great Britain.

OUTLINES CHANGE IN VOLSTEAD ACT TO RESTORE BEER

Max Henius Would Alter Alcohol Limit.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

An amendment of the Volstead act, changing the alcohol limit from one-half of one per cent by volume to 3 per cent by weight, is advocated by Max Henius, president of the Wahl-Henius institute, as the first step in getting rid of national prohibition.

A 3 per cent beer, he suggests, once it is legalized by congress can then be sold at 5 cents a glass in groceries, hotels, restaurants, drug stores and other places, and a liquor control system would not be involved, the beer being a non-intoxicant. A tax of $6 a barrel, he estimates, would yield $300,000,000 a year.

Mr. Henius, who since 1886 has been connected with the Wahl-Henius institute's laboratory and brewing college, declares that he has scanned several bills in congress to legalize beer, and that most of them are unsatisfactory and would set the modification and repeal movement back.

Repeal 18th Amendment.

The second step, he sets forth, is repeal of the 18th amendment. In a brochure, "Stepping Stones from Prohibition," just issued, Mr. Henius says:

"The first step is amending the Volstead act, changing the alcohol limit from one-half of one per cent by volume to 3 per cent by weight. This can be done by congress by a simple majority. It does not affect the balance of the Volstead act and can be done under the 18th amendment.

"In the opinion of many chemists, psychologists and physicians a 3 per cent alcohol-cointaining beverage is non-intoxicating in fact.

"Alcohol is only one of the constituents of beer, and not the most important one from the point of view of wholesomeness, nutritive value, and palatability. Beer contains certain solids derived from the grain, which are comprised under the name of extract. A beer with 3 per cent of alcohol by weight should contain about 4½ per cent of extract. The ratio between extract and alcohol is fairly constant. Hence if the alcohol content is less, the extract also would be less and the beverage would be thin and unpalatable.

"Palatability and thirst quenching property are both much greater when there is a certain amount of solids or body in the liquid. The presence of the extract also has the effect of minimizing the influence of the alcohol. Good beverages can be produced with an alcohol content of 3 per cent by weight.

Might Be Sold in Groceries.

"After the Volstead act shall have been amended by shifting the line between intoxicating and non-intoxicating beverages from one-half of one per cent by volume to 3 per cent by weight, beer containing 3 per cent of alcohol by weight will be recognized by that law as non-intoxicating in fact.

"It can then be sold and served like any other non-intoxicating beverage, in groceries, hotels, drug stores, soda fountains, etc. It would gain a wide distribution, both at public dispensaries and in the home. Chicago has no less than 20,000 places where such beverages are sold, to say nothing of the home consumption."

PROWLER FOUND DEAD FROM THE EFFECTS OF FALL

Melvin Gain, 35 years old, 804 North Wabash avenue, was found dead yesterday in a courtyard at 805 North Wabash avenue, supposedly from the effects of a fall Saturday night.

Mrs. Charles Engelbracht entered the bathroom of her third floor apartment during the evening and saw a man peering through the window from a fire escape outside. She screamed and the man disappeared before her husband got to the window.

Gain was found beneath the fire escape in the morning, his head crushed by the fall. He was identified through fingerprint records at the bureau of identification, where he had been taken following his conviction on a charge of disorderly conduct in January, 1931. Letters found in his pockets showed that he apparently had been living in Atlanta, Ga.

INDIANA ORDERS GAS STATIONS OFF HIGHWAYS

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 20.—[Special.]—Filling stations erected within the right of way of state roads must be moved, the Indiana state highway commission decreed today.

Strings of lights across highways placed by commercial concerns and red flashing lights also are taboo.

The order to move filling stations points out that some gasoline pumps congest and interfere with traffic when cars stop to take on gas and oil, their presence thus being inimical to public interest and safety. Further, on narrow but heavy traveled roads gasoline pumps, filling stations and commercial houses are ordered set sufficiently back from the right of way so as not to induce patrons to park their cars on the right of way.

A. F. OF L. COUNCIL CALLS FOR BEER FROM CONGRESS

Third of U. S. Workers Idle, It Asserts.

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 20.—(AP)—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor today reported "the indications are that favorable action providing for a modification of the Volstead act" to permit beer "will be taken at the short session of congress which meets December 5."

It added that the council "will present an earnest appeal and a strong demand to the members of congress when the short session convenes . . . to pass the necessary legislation . . . at the earliest possible date."

Urges Higher Wages.

The report prepared for presentation at the federation's fifty-second annual convention meeting here tomorrow urged higher wages and work-sharing as part of a program to restore purchasing power and prosperity, asserting "we are slowly starving nearly half our population."

On prohibition, the report said there is indicated "a genuine desire on the part of the membership of the American Federation of Labor to promote the cause of temperance, and, in addition, through the rehabilitation of the brewing and related industries, create work opportunities for thousands of idle people."

At the last session of congress, it said, "an increasing number of members voted in favor of a modification of the Volstead act" and "it must be clearly evident to all classes of people that public opinion has greatly changed upon this question."

Says Millions Hunger.

Devoting most of its space to economic matters, the report said there is in this country "a deep feeling of revolt against a situation that denies workers a chance to earn a living."

It estimated "at least 60,000,000 persons" are now living below minimum health and efficiency standards and said "we are denying one-third of our wage and small salaried workers the right to work. Could there be a more serious indictment of our present economic order?"

"Slow starvation means," the report added, "that gradually physical vitality is being sapped, anxiety and despair are creating a spirit of suspicion, fear and rebellion. . . . Workers have borne the brunt of the depression. . . . Industry cannot possibly recover until workers' buying power is restored. . . . The process of raising wages must be carried on cooperatively throughout industry."

For Job Insurance.

The council announced it will recommend nation-wide compulsory unemployment insurance. The cost, it was recommended, should be supported by industry alone as "the management of industry has not provided work security or created work opportunities for those who are able, willing, and eager to work."

Therefore, it was argued, "industry must be compelled to do what it has thus far failed to do. Work or relief must be provided." Enactment of a compulsory unemployment insurance plan in each state was suggested. Contributions of not less than 3 per cent of the total pay roll of the individual employer were set as the sum to be invested in federal securities for purposes of the unemployment insurance.

SHOW ILLINOIS SUPPLIES 60% OF CITY MILK

Survey Made After State Dairymen Complain.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Chicago and its suburbs now consume more milk from the herds of Illinois dairymen than at any time since 1928, the year preceding the drive for enforcement of a new city ordinance providing that all milk and cream used here must be from tuberculin tested cattle.

This was disclosed yesterday in a study of records kept by the city health department of the 27,000 dairy farms which have passed inspection and are entitled to send fresh milk or cream to Chicago. It was found that Illinois dairymen are supplying more than both Wisconsin and Indiana farmers combined, in spite of the nearness of this market to accredited herds in the adjoining states.

Discrimination Is Charged.

The study was made after Illinois dairymen had charged that they were being discriminated against in the largest city of the state to which they pay taxes. It shows that only when Illinois dairymen could not supply market requirements in years past have Wisconsin and Indiana farmers been given the milk business which amounts to more than a half million dollars a week.

In 1926, when the proposed Chicago ordinance raising standards for the city's milk and cream supply was announced, thousands of farmers in Illinois were unable to meet its requirements. Many of them openly opposed the testing of their herds by state or federal veterinarians and as a result Chicago turned to Wisconsin and Indiana for much of its milk.

At that time, the records show, Illinois dairymen supplied 55 per cent of the market milk; Wisconsin dairymen, 30 per cent; and Indiana dairymen, 15 per cent. In 1927 Illinois supplied 39 per cent Wisconsin, 49 per cent; and Indiana, 10 per cent. Every state from which Chicago could buy milk except Illinois has since been accredited by federal authorities as to the freedom of its herds from tuberculin reacting cows, including Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio.

Illinois Now Supplies 60%.

Today, the study discloses, Illinois is supply 60 per cent, Wisconsin 28 per cent, and Indiana 12 per cent, of the metropolitan milk needs of more than 3,000,000 people. And Chicago is getting more milk today than it did in 1927 from 8,000 fewer farms, by reason of improved practices of the dairymen who qualified for selling to Chicago.

There are now 2,700 farmers shipping milk direct to Chicago in trucks within a radius of 70 miles. In addition there are several thousand farmers supplying milk and cream for the 113 country dairy plants in operation. There are 67 of these plants in Wisconsin, 32 in Illinois, 10 in Indiana, 3 in Michigan and 1 in Ohio.

One of the forces which has been operating to regain the Chicago market for Illinois farmers is the steady increase in truck shipments under more economical and sanitary practices. The records show that in 1928 55.5 per cent of Chicago's milk came in tank cars, 20 per cent in motor tank trucks, 17 per cent in trucks hauling cans of milk and 7.5 per cent by express trains.

This year 86 per cent of the milk supply is coming by truck—36 per cent in tank trucks and 30 per cent in trucks carrying cans. Only 2 per cent comes in express cars and 32 per cent in tank cars.

Find State Authorities Lax.

As a result of yesterday's study it becomes apparent that one of the chief forces operating against Illinois farmers in regaining the bulk of the Chicago milk and cream business is the failure of state authorities to enforce the state and federal tuberculin testing laws.

Legally it is possible to compel every dairyman in a county to have his herd tested when 75 per cent of the herds in the county are tested. While not a single northern Illinois county is thus fully accredited, many of them have as high as 95 per cent of the cows certified as "accredited" by veterinarians.

The survey shows that Illinois dairymen close enough to ship milk and cream to Chicago economically do not have enough cattle qualifying under the state and city requirements to supply Chicago with all the milk and cream it requires. Illinois dairymen could supply all the fresh milk needed in Chicago, but not all the cream.

As smokers become more experienced, they demand milder cigarettes. Chesterfields are milder. Their mildness is just as much a feature as the beauty of their package. The tobaccos are mild to begin with. Patient ageing and curing make them milder still. And Chesterfields contain just the right amount of Turkish—not too much—carefully blended and cross-blended with ripe, sweet Domestic tobaccos.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. That's why "They Satisfy."

CAPITOL BLDG. OWES $144,939 IN 1930 TAXES

Five Other Unpaid Parcels Listed on Tribune Map.

Six parcels of property upon which no 1930 taxes have been paid are shown in THE TRIBUNE tax map published this morning. The area shown is bounded by State street, Lake street, Beaubien court and Randolph street. The shaded areas on the map show those properties upon which the 1930 taxes have been paid partially or in full. The white areas indicate the properties upon which no 1930 taxes have been paid.

Taxes totaling $144,939 for 1930 remain unpaid on the Capitol building, formerly the Masonic Temple building, at State and Randolph streets, the county treasurer's records show. The building is listed as being owned by the State Randolph Building corporation, 159 North State street.

Five Other Parcels.

The five other parcels of property found in the area upon which the 1930 taxes remain unpaid, according to the records, follow:

Tax bill sent to:	Amt. owed.
James F. Porter, care of Sol H. Goldborg, 1018 Prairie avenue, S. E. corner State and Lake streets	$36,466
E. D. Kenneth and J. M. Durand, care of Winston & Co., 38 S. Dearborn street, N. E. corner Wabash avenue and Benton place	15,711

S. and C. M. Jordan, 200 E. Erie st.	11,305
William P. Kopt, 208 S. La Salle	31,172

The facts and figures given on the map and in this story were gathered from the county treasurer's tax books. The names given are those to whom the tax bills are addressed. These persons and corporations in many instances are merely the agents of or lessors to the persons who are actually liable for the bills. The records are as of Nov. 14.

Standing of Other Parcels

The following taxpayers, according to the tax books, have made the following payments or partial payments on parcels of property in the area:

INSOLVENT PARK BOARD DREADS ACCOUNTING DAY

Emmerson Appointees Now Seek His Aid.

West park commissioners appointed under the present state administration were confronted yesterday with the necessity of giving an accounting of their stewardship. They were preparing to turn over to their Democratic successors an emptied treasury, a set of books showing how many million dollars of debts they have saddled onto the taxpayers, and a park system which is said to be "hopelessly insolvent" and yet which afforded soft berths to hundreds of petty politicians.

It was learned the commissioners had appealed to Gov. Emmerson to help them in making their final settlement "with as little unpleasantness as possible."

What will happen when they hand over "less than nothing" to their Democratic successors is said to be the principal worry of the commissioners at present, with the prospect of a grand jury investigation presenting itself.

All Emmerson Appointees.

Gov. Emmerson appointed all the present members of the West park board. W. R. James, president of the board, is a close friend of Gov. Emmerson and he was given the management of the large park system with its rich patronage and its millions of yearly revenue from the taxpayers. Mr. James is said to have been the controlling factor on the board.

The present crisis in the affairs of the commissioners had its beginning when the park board ran out of cash and had to appeal to the banks for loans. The citizens' committee on public expenditures, of which Fred W. Sargent, and D. F. Kelly are leaders, was aiding other public bodies which showed a willingness to cooperate in economizing.

The citizens' committee ordered an audit of the park board books by the firm of George Rossetter, chairman of the Chicago Association of Commerce—not a political audit but one that would reveal exactly what had been done with the west side taxpayers' money and credit. Before election the citizens' committee let it be known that an "explosion" was due for the west park system after the campaigning was out of the way.

Report "Too Hot" for Public.

After election the executive committee of the citizens' committee met and decided the report of the audit was "too hot to give to the public." The park commissioners were reported to have begun maneuvering to have this report suppressed and they rushed to Gov. Emmerson with their trouble.

What Gov. Emmerson intends to do has not been announced, but the west park commissioners were said to be pinning their hopes on the conference scheduled for today between Gov. Emmerson and Governor Elect Henry Horner on the state budget.

ARREST MAN, 54, ON CHARGES OF ENTICING GIRL, 9

Carl Ranzell, 54 years old, was arrested yesterday in his room at 2346 Jackson boulevard on a charge of molesting a 9 year old girl. Police said that he enticed the child with candy. Ranzell denied the accusation. He was booked on a charge of committing a crime against children and will appear in Felony court today.

Police last night sought a 17 year old youth who attempted to attack a girl 14 years old in the basement of her home at 1717 North Francisco avenue. He was armed with a revolver.

JOHN OBERTA'S MOTHER KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE

Mrs. Antoinette Oberta, mother of John (Dinghat) Oberta, southwest side hoodlum, who was slain several years ago, was struck and fatally injured by an automobile at Kedzie avenue and 47th street late last night. She was 50 years old and lived at 5544 South Richmond street.

The automobile which hit Mrs. Oberta sped away without stopping. Witnesses said that it was a coupé and had no licenses. Mrs. Oberta was taken to the South Town hospital, where she died early this morning. She was identified by a son, William Oberta. A small picture of Mrs. Oberta, which resembled that of her murdered son, led to the identification.

John Erickson, 47 years old, a butcher, lost control of his automobile yesterday when a front wheel struck a hole in the pavement in front of 6135 Wentworth avenue. The automobile crashed against a light pole hurling Erickson to the street and causing injuries from which he died a few hours later in St. Bernard's hospital. Erickson lived at 7543 Rhodes avenue.

The two deaths and one other increased the Cook county automobile toll since last Jan. 1 to 1,005.

Frank Lindenberg, 70 years old, 3645 North Seeley avenue, retired merchant. Died in Belmont hospital of injuries received when he was struck last night by an automobile at Belmont and Elston avenues. The car was driven by L. W. Debowski, 29 years old, 869 Wrightwood avenue, who was held for the inquest.

BRITISH POLICE LAUNCH A WAR ON 'HIGHWAYMEN'

Operate from Same Town as in Coach Days.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 20.—In the old coach days, when highwaymen operated along Watling street, Dunstable was a town of great importance in police activity. History is repeating itself today.

Modern criminals who use this famous road have made the police station in the little town of Dunstable one of the vital centers in the country. There is scarcely any rest, day or night, for the police officers who are stationed there. For many years the superintendent of the division had his headquarters at Luton, but modern traffic and modern criminals have made it necessary for a daily journey to Dunstable. It has now been decided to transfer the chief of the division to Dunstable.

War on Motor Bandits.

This is part of the big war which is being waged on motor bandits along Watling street. There are eleven miles of this road in the Luton division, and it is known that the road is constantly used by criminals.

Part of Watling street forms Dunstable's main road and the town's police station is always busy. Almost every hour, day and night, urgent messages are telephoned from the big towns which are linked with Watling street asking the Dunstable police to watch for suspects who have escaped after carrying out a high speed raid.

Last year the Dunstable police were asked by other forces to keep special observation 1,115 times. By October this year outside forces had asked for help 1,141 times. Messages come in a stream from the metropolitan police area and from provincial towns.

Sample Messages.

"Watch for a blue saloon car with four men making for London; may reach Dunstable about midnight," is a sample.

"Watch for sports car with two men suspected of housebreaking; may pass through Dunstable on way north," is another example.

Dunstable police were also called during the last year to 223 road accidents.

A constant police patrol has to be kept on this ceaseless stream of traffic and also on the 11 mile stretch of road which is dotted with filling stations and all night cafés. Garage proprietors and owners of cafés frequently send messages to Dunstable about the visits of suspected persons.

Watling street appeals to the modern criminal because of its facilities for a quick retreat from London to little known parts of the countryside. It is frequented by men who specialize in country house thefts, gangs who raid London shops and warehouses, and armed bandits who hold up motorists on lonely roads.

SEES BIG SAVING THROUGH UNION OF CITY, COUNTY

Prof. Merriam Explains Economy Plan.

As one of seven solutions for elimination of the multiplicity of overlapping governments in the Chicago metropolitan area, Prof. Charles E. Merriam, political scientist of the University of Chicago, suggests a consolidation of Chicago with Cook county.

This consolidation, Prof. Merriam notes in a report of his study, is a major problem in the unification of the Chicago region. He points out that 22½ per cent of the territory of Cook county lies within Chicago; 85 per cent of its population, and 84 per cent of its taxable property, and states that the inconvenience and wastefulness of the dual arrangement is obvious.

Assails Double Overhead.

"Two sets of overhead expense run through the system in law, finance, engineering and civil service," the report declares. "Both maintain a department of public welfare. There are city police and county police. There is a county sheriff and a city police commissioner; there are county judges and municipal courts with overlapping jurisdictions; there are assistant state's attorneys and city prosecutors, both in attendance on many cases. The city has its parks and the county its forest preserve districts, and these are not coördinated. The county has its hospitals and the city has its municipal tuberculosis sanitarium.

"Not infrequently these rivals flare out in ferocious controversy at the taxpayers' expense. The city will not pay its taxes and the county will not pay for its prisoners in the House of Correction, and each bills and counterbills the other right merrily."

Sees "Very Great" Saving.

The most obvious solution, Prof. Merriam states in his report, would be the consolidation of the city and county at a "very great" saving in annual expenditure and to the "great advantage of democratic control over the processes of government in the region." He suggests that the simplest method would be to include all of the county within the limits of the city, and in that case territory now outside the city might be federated with Chicago and given local autonomy.

"An outstanding advantage of city-county consolidation," reads the report, "would be the simplification of political control. The lines of responsibility would run far more directly and clearly, so that the voter might better view the political picture. The number of offices to be selected locally would be reduced to two, a member of the central controlling board, and a chief executive. If it were decided to have a county manager the number might be reduced to one.

Would Shorten Ballot.

"This does not include the elective judges in the city and county, now numbering 89. Various plans have been proposed, however, for the reduction of the number of elective judges in the city and county, and it is entirely within the limits of possibility that this figure might be reduced to one presiding justice or to a small board of presiding judges. The other judicial officials might be chosen by this judge or by the presiding panel.

"With a greatly shortened ballot the task of the voter would be much simpler and easier, and more intelligent choices might be made of local officials than at present."

POLICEMAN SLAIN BY GUNMAN

Policeman Patrick Madden (left), who was slain by a gunman early yesterday after the later had been arrested, and Policeman Roman Orzechowski, who was seriously wounded.

Killer Is Identified

The police yesterday were seeking Frank Bialek, 24 years old, 638 North Sawyer avenue, as the gunman who earlier in the day shot one policeman to death and seriously wounded another.

Patrick Madden, 54 years old, 2903 Belmont avenue, a veteran of the force, was the policeman killed. Policeman Roman Orzechowski was shot in the abdomen. At St. Mary's hospital it was said he had an even chance for recovery.

The shooting occurred at Holt and Walton streets after Bialek had been arrested by Madden for shooting promiscuously in the vicinity. As Madden instructed other policemen to call a patrol wagon, Bialek whipped out a revolver and shot him.

Orzechowski went to Madden's aid but before he could draw his weapon he was felled by a bullet from Bialek's gun. The latter escaped amid a volley of shots fired by four other policemen who had responded to a radio alarm.

Mrs. Stella Bialek, 22 years old, wife of the alleged slayer, who was taken into custody for questioning, told Capt. Palczynski her husband became angry when she danced with another man at a party at 1451 Walton street and started shooting up the neighborhood.

According to Capt. Palczynski, Bialek has a police record as a robber.

Frank Bialek, the gunman sought for killing Policeman Madden and wounding Policeman Orzechowski.

350 MILLION IN LAND CASES UP TO TEXAS COURT

Austin, Tex., Nov. 20.—(AP)—Arguments are to start tomorrow before the Texas Supreme court in three land suits involving property valued at about 350 million dollars.

The contested area, which includes the rich Yates oil field in Pecos county of west Texas, comprises about 4,000 acres.

In addition to the land involved there are $50,000,000 in bonuses, rentals, and royalties held in escrow awaiting final judgment of the courts to determine to whom payments should be made. The state free public school fund has a large interest both in the suits to determine title and in the escrow funds. In one of the suits there were 178 parties at interest. The Supreme court has consolidated the cases and will dispose of them all in one opinion.

3 STAGES OF A COLD

Far Easier Relieved in the First Than in the Second or Third Stage!

It has been discovered that a cold ordinarily passes through three stages. The first is the Dry Stage, the first 24 hours. The second is the Watery Secretion Stage; 1 to 3 days. The third, the Mucous Secretion Stage. A cold is far easier relieved in the first stage than in the later stages.

The wise thing is not to let the cold get into the second stage. Check it quickly. This you can do by taking Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. A few of these tablets taken immediately upon catching cold will usually expel the cold overnight and thus prevent the infection spreading within the system. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine routs a cold quickly because it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels—kills the cold germs, infection and fever in the system—relieves the headache and grippy feeling—tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

No worry about what you're taking when you take Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It is utterly safe. Contains no narcotics and produces no bad after-effects. Does not upset the stomach or make the head ring. Every drug store in America sells Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It has been the standard cold tablet for years. Handy, pocket-size box, cellophane-wrapped. Remember, anything less than the treatment afforded by Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is taking chances. Get it today. Accept nothing else.

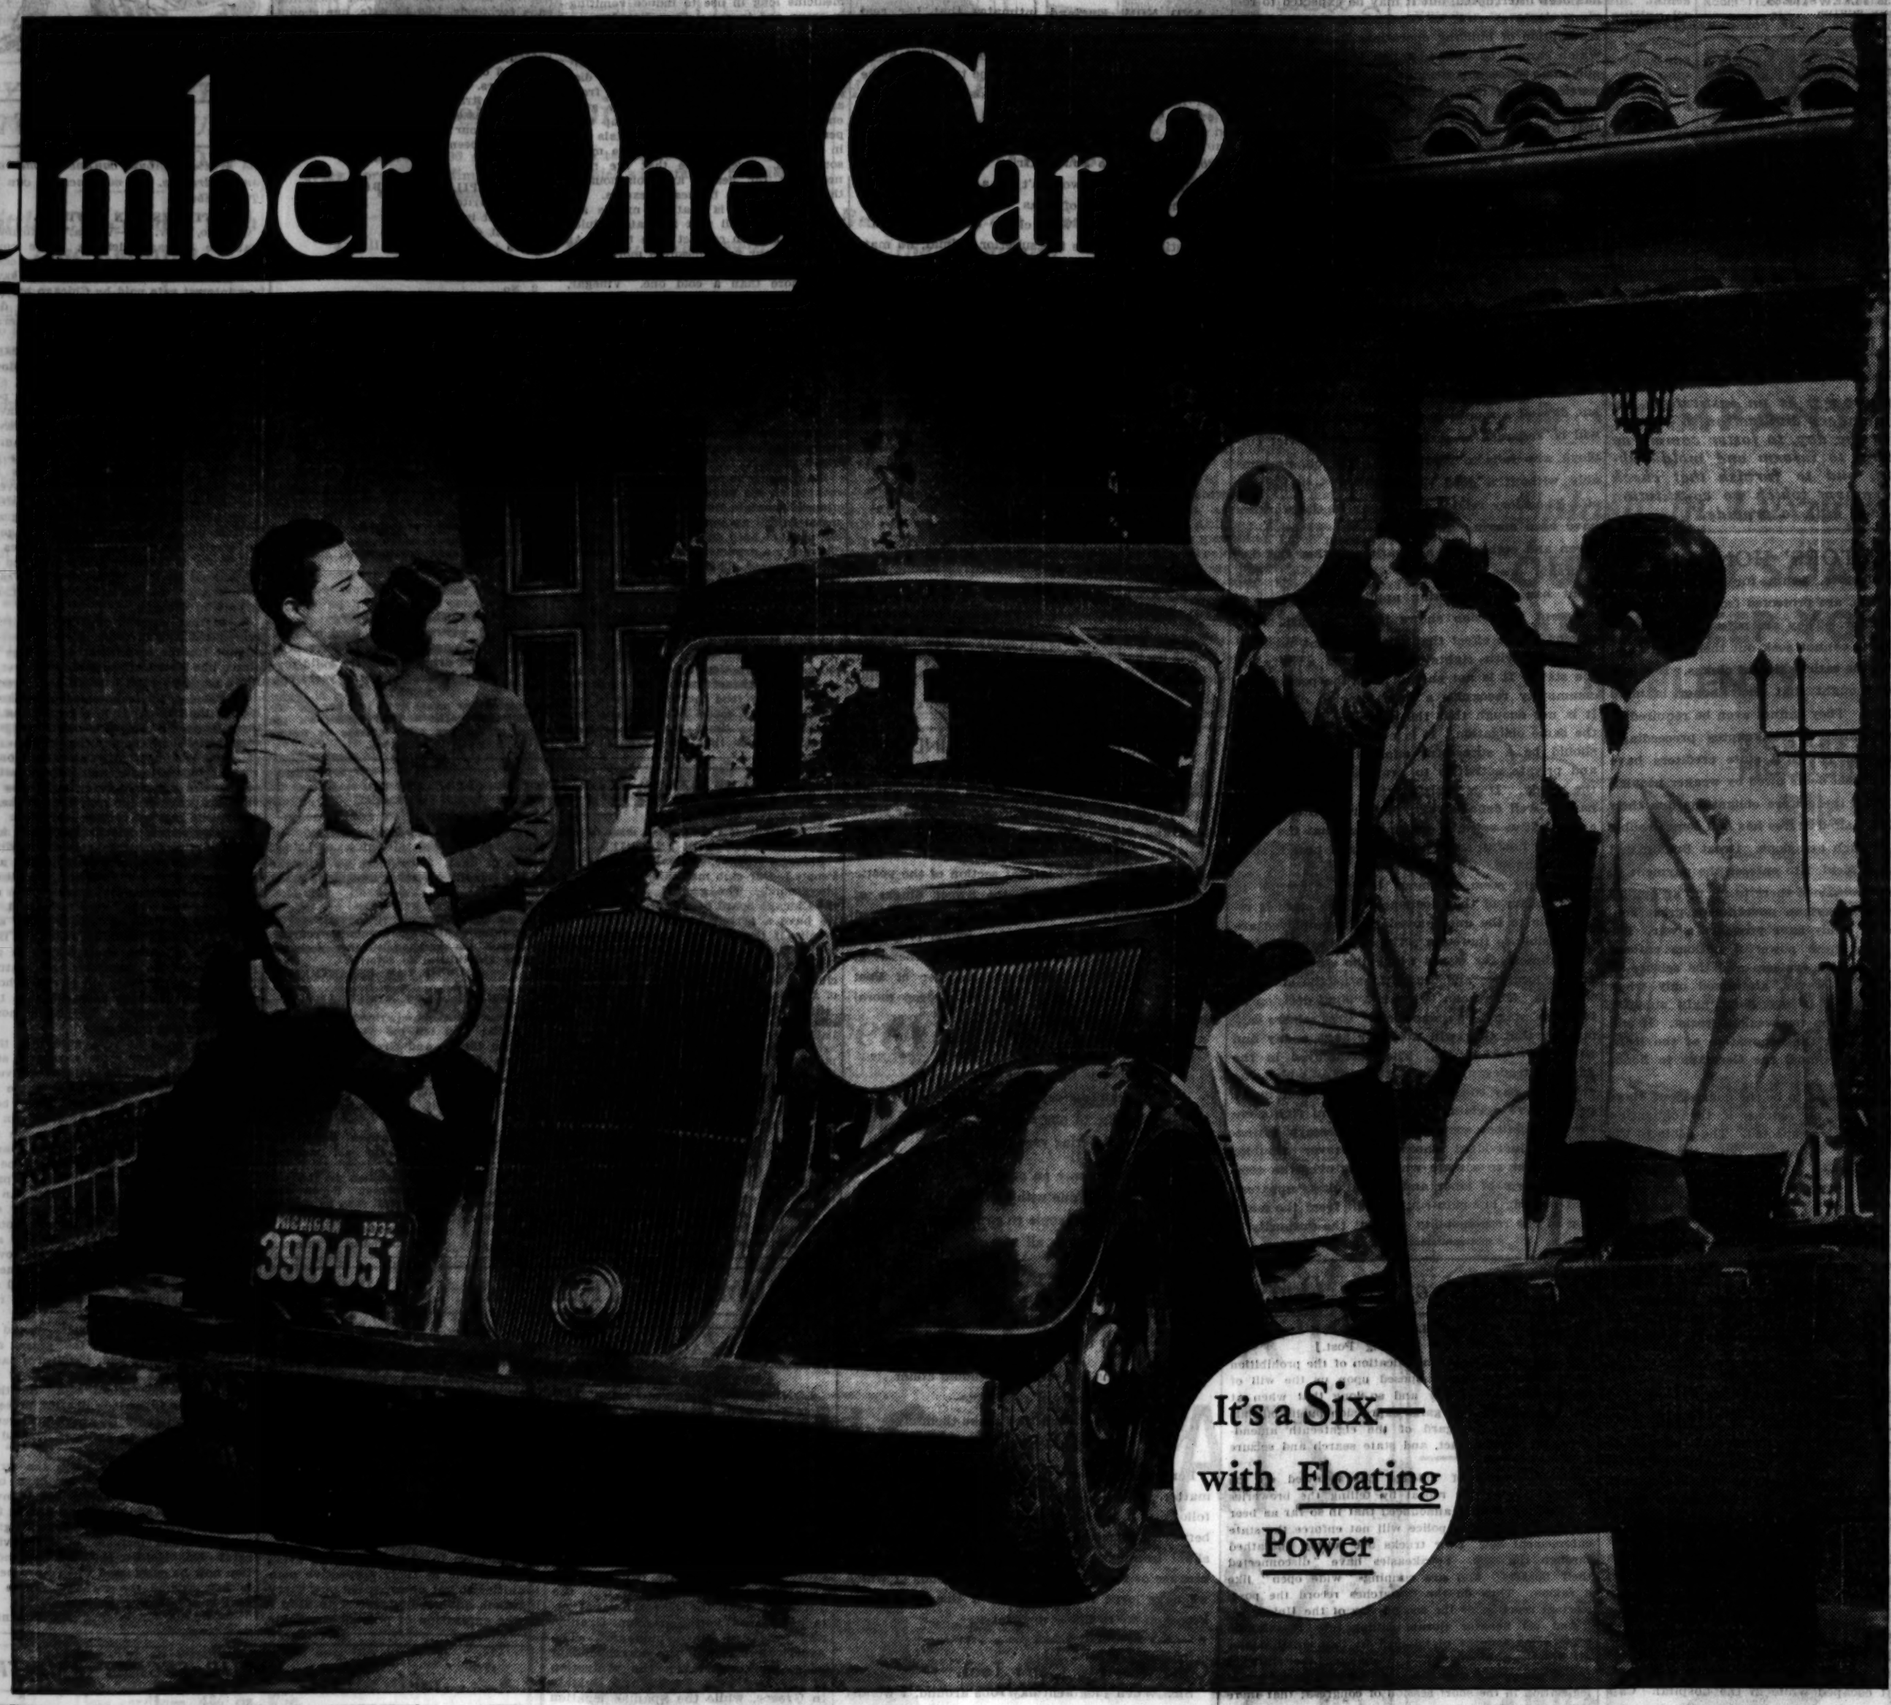
Will this be America's next Number One Car?



IT'S A SIX WITH FLOATING POWER

Behind that sleek radiator there's a big 70-horsepower six-cylinder engine with Patented Floating Power. The most efficient Six built, dynamometer tests reveal. Free wheeling, as a matter of course, with an easy-shift transmission. Hydraulic four-wheel brakes and rigid-X frame. Tubular front axle; heat-resistant valve seats; oilite (non-squeak) springs; down-draft dust-sealed carburetor with automatic heat control, and full-sized, roomy, safety-steel bodies with Duplate Safety Plate Glass windshields.

It's a Six—with Floating Power

It's the New Plymouth...a SIX at $60 less than last year! Again "Look at All Three"

JUST a week ago .... Walter P. Chrysler announced the new Plymouth Six. Just seven days . . . but wherever you go . . . in hotels, clubs, on trains and in theatre lobbies . . . you hear people say, "Walter P. Chrysler is headed straight for the top."

"The new Plymouth Six is a coming best-seller." "It's bound to be America's next Number One Car."

One thing is clear, Walter P. Chrysler and his engineers knew what the public wanted. They knew that the combination of a six-cylinder engine with Floating Power was unbeatable.

They knew that Americans hate to be squeezed in . . . so they made the new Plymouth Six a big, roomy car.

They understood human nature. We all want a car that travels fast . . . that's thrilling to drive. They made it safer than other low-priced cars . . . by giving it a safety-steel body . . . . hydraulic four-wheel brakes . . . a rigid-X frame!

They built it to set new economy records . . . in gas, oil, tires and upkeep. And, last but not least, they gave people a low-priced car without that "low-priced look."

No wonder Walter P. Chrysler invites you to drive this much talked-about automobile. No wonder he wants your answer to the intriguing question: "Will this be America's next Number One Car?"

Again he says, "Look at the new Plymouth Six! Look at All Three . . . and may the best car win!"

DEBTORS' HONOR.

America's debtors, being for the most part powerful nations, are protected from the ordinary law of the debtor. They are safe from enforced collections. Law cannot seek out their assets and apply them to the satisfaction of claims. It might therefore be thought that their honor is more deeply involved. They cannot even be required to face the humiliation of bankruptcy proceedings.

It is true that powerful state creditors have used force to collect debts owed by weaker peoples, principally when these were obligations due their subjects. The United States has had some trouble with them on such occasions. Great Britain and France entered Mexico to enforce the payment of debts. France remained there to set up an empire which cost the American government great concern and might easily have provoked a war. The world has seen these powerful nations enforce their collections with cruisers and the seizure of customs. It is, however, attempted only when the creditor nation is overwhelmingly superior and the debtor nation too weak to resist. It will be remembered that the occupation of the Ruhr was ostensibly to compel the Germans to honor their obligations.

Punctuality was said to be the courtesy of kings because there was no redress if the obligation was not scrupulously respected. The debts to the United States are collectible only through the honor of the debtors. Repudiation will have its effect upon the credit of the welcher, but not a penny can be had by any of the methods by which a private creditor could obtain satisfaction from an unwilling debtor.

Such being the case, it might seem the more desirable and the more required that the European debtor nations should change their approach to the United States by suggesting ways in which they might pay rather than reasons why they can't or won't.

WAR RECORDS NOT A LICENSE FOR CRIME.

The community will be grateful to Judge John J. Sullivan for refusing to let perverted sentiment defeat justice in the case of the malefactor, Stepina. Stepina has a record for bravery in the late war, was gassed and wounded, and has decorations from three governments. This record may very well have been pleaded in extenuation of a first offense, even a rather serious offense. But Stepina has been not only a serious but a repeated offender. He was sent to the Bridewell twice and later engaged in an attempt at robbery accompanied by gun play, in which his companion was killed. For this he was sentenced to the penitentiary but escaped while in the hospital. Captured and landed in the penitentiary, he succeeded in escaping again, and some time after recapture was paroled. He took advantage of his freedom by robbing a bank messenger and after three years in prison was paroled again on the request of the Bankers' association, presumably because of his war record. Once more at large he abused his freedom last July when he committed another robbery, but was caught. For this latest crime he was convicted by a jury and Judge Sullivan sentenced him to life imprisonment as a habitual criminal. To the plea for further leniency Judge Sullivan said: "You have been given every opportunity. You are completely anti-social and no good. The community must be given some consideration."

It is important that a war record should not be considered an offset to serious criminality. Stepina seems to have banked on his for a permanent license as a marauder. But we do not fight wars to destroy peace, and a soldier is as fully obligated to obey the laws and conform to the restraints of civilized society as a civilian. There have been indications that war service in some cases has been utilized as a racket, and the rank and file of service men resent this abuse of national gratitude even more than others. It is certainly no alibi for crime.

SWEDEN AND THE CENTURY OF PROGRESS.

The news that the Swedish cabinet has voted against participation in the Century of Progress next year is a matter for regret both in the United States and Sweden. Within a day's motoring distance from Chicago live hundreds of thousands of men and women of Swedish blood. Swedish societies from all over the country, and indeed from all over the world, have arranged to meet in Chicago next summer in connection with the exposition. Needless to say, these tens of thousands of visitors will be disappointed, not to say humiliated, if their home land is not represented.

Americans generally will have other and perhaps more substantial reasons for regretting the decision of the Swedish cabinet. The contemporary movement in American architecture and decoration owes much to Swedish influences. American architects, and, it might be added, Chicago architects in particular, have done much more than study the works of their contemporaries in Sweden; they have incorporated in our buildings not a few of the works of Swedish masters of decoration. Milles is particularly well represented in public monuments in Chicago and must be almost as well known here as in Stockholm. Only recently the Chicago Art Institute has acquired a Swedish peasant cottage for its collection of domestic interiors, and it might be added that this gift came from one who has no Swedish blood.

The great interest in Swedish art in this community has resulted in a steady increase in travel to Sweden by cultivated Americans. During the business depression, naturally, the flow of travelers has been interrupted, but it may be expected to resume again as soon as conditions improve. The resumption of building operations in this country, which cannot be delayed much longer, should result in an increasing demand for Swedish products, particularly if the American people are familiar with them. It is scarcely an exaggeration to say that Sweden stands to lose more, nationally at least, from nonparticipation than does America.

Fortunately for both countries, Americans of Swedish blood have refused to regard the decision of the cabinet as final. A new plan is under consideration by which various individuals and societies in this country are preparing to underwrite a Swedish pavilion at the fair. New representations are to be made to the Swedish government for participation. It is to be hoped that on these terms the Swedish government will find it possible to join with other nations in the exposition.

THE RIGHT TO WAGES.

A dispatch from Moscow says that more than one day off a month in the proletarian industries will be regarded as malingering. The soviet employé who fails to show up on the job, presumably without a good reason for it, will be laid off. The story related that many of the workers have been staying away from work as much as seven and eight days a month and that the dictatorship does not intend to tolerate it. The point has an interesting application here.

Recent discussion shows there is considerable opinion to the effect that unemployment vests an individual with rights and imposes a duty on the state. It is not enough that the people of a community recognise a humanitarian obligation. It is not enough that the government recognises the same obligation. It is not enough that there should be a successful effort by public action and private activities to provide subsistence for the needy. It is insisted that the unemployed have a well defined right and are entitled to an authoritative voice in determining what the relief shall be, how much it shall be, and how it shall be distributed.

It would seem pertinent to call attention to the corollary of that doctrine. If the state is responsible to the unemployed, the unemployed are responsible to the state. They must work as the state directs, for wages which the state can pay, and in localities and occupations as the state determines. There can be no individual decision as to hours, wages, or occupations. Coal miners cannot say that they will work for $6.25 a day and will not work for $5. The unemployed in the building trades must take the wages which the state will pay them. In the doctrine that needy people have a claim based on natural rights enforcible against society is the necessary extinction of individual choice. Whatever troubles might come to a state which took over the complete control of labor and capital, it is apparent that nothing but ruin could result from the adoption of the responsibility without the authority.

Editorial of the Day

OPEN NULLIFICATION.

[New York Evening Post.]

At last we have open nullification of the prohibition laws. The drys have imposed upon us the will of the minority so bitterly and so long that when at last the majority will gains expression public officials proclaim open disregard of the eighteenth amendment, the Volstead act, and state search and seizure acts.

Mayor Cermak of Chicago has followed up the national verdict for repeal by telling the breweries to "fire up." He has announced that in so far as beer is concerned his city police will not enforce the state enforcement act. Beer trucks are rolling unscathed through the loop. Speakeasies have "disconnected their bussers" and are running "wide open" like a saloon. Thus do the dispatches record the post-election reaction of the second city of the Union.

And yet Senator Borah, sailing into Washington after some months of sojourn in that great center of American population and opinion, the state of Idaho, announces that there can be no beer or repeal legislation in the short session of congress; that there will not be time because congress has to act on balancing the budget and on the independence of the Philippines.

Was there ever a clearer case of negation of the people's will? Is not the return of taxed beer the very fundament of a balanced budget? What is the importance of the Philippine question compared with that of a problem that is still shaking the national government itself?

The truth is that Borah and the drys, if they maintain this blockading attitude, will simply drive this country into a position of nullification of law even more widespread and open than that which Mayor Cermak has decreed in Chicago. We have had the scandal of lawbreaking with us in increasing proportions ever since prohibition went upon the statute books. Respect for law has been broken down by the ruthless and impossible efforts to force down the throat of the people a rule of personal conduct of which they disapprove. One of the great satisfactions of the repeal sentiment and action at both national conventions was the feeling that now at last law was about to conform to the conscience of the people and thus reëstablish itself in the people's respect.

Are not the prohibitionists now to join in this readjustment? Or are they to be bitter-enders and force upon the country nullification open and still more open? Before we can get back to any final termination of the prohibition problem we must get back to respect for law. We can't expect Cannon or the drys to know this. But we can and do expect Borah to know it.

And how about the President?

Were he to take the leadership for the modification of the Volstead act and the restoration of taxed beer he would be interpreting into action the overwhelmingly expressed verdict of his countrymen. He would be accepting the will of the majority. He would be living up to the highest ideals of a representative democratic government. We hope devoutly to see him do it. If he doesn't we may well see the country plunge into a new anarchy of open and official nullification.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

ONE GOOD THING—and there'll probably be many—that will come out of the visit of Gov. Roosevelt to President Hoover is that many are bound to observe that Mr. Roosevelt is still governor and Mr. Hoover is still President. It will be observed by a great many that President Hoover is still in the White House and that Gov. Roosevelt is a caller. That should do much to calm people who are indignant that Mr. Roosevelt hasn't already brought back five per cent beer or arranged for the immediate employment of every one out of a job.

A BATTLE OF THE BARDS IN INDIANA

The Wabash poetry belt in Indiana is much excited over the publication in the Line of "Our Departed Chief," by Wilber F. Merkle, Tiller Man, Hook and Ladder No. 2, Evanston, Ind. While Evanston, Ind., is also in the Wabash poetry belt, the most revered bard in that section of the poetic field is James B. Elmore, the Sweet Singer of Alamo, Ind., and considerable feeling is displayed over the appearance of one who would pluck the wreath from the head of the author of the w. k. poem, "The Monon Wreck." Another of Poet Elmore's immortal odes, one with a deep moral purpose, is the following:

"ALCOHOL.

"Alcohol is like a snake:
It can't be kept in bounds;
It makes of one a perfect wreck,
A wandering vagrant hound.

"It steals away an active brain,
And fills one with remorse,
And causes people to go insane,
Their soul is all morose.

"In dread of those, we stand in awe,
Who tipple at the wine;
They all disgrace the moral law—
Their manners are unkind.

"All sons and daughters should abhor
The actions of such loots—
For this is what they make themselves
When whisky's up their snoots."

Personally, we don't wish to take sides in the matter. It is a question which the bards and their followers in the poetry belt of Indiana must settle between themselves. We may admit, however, a slight leaning to the Sweet Singer of Alamo, Ind., because of the "Monon Wreck," portions of which we have loved to quote. And if this controversy keeps on we're liable to print it.

METALLIC FOOD POISONING.

DR. B. E. WAGNER offers one explanation of the fact that a group of persons were poisoned by drinking a lemon drink. The liquid had been heated in a gray granite ware vessel in which it had been allowed to stand for several hours. He says the poisoning was due to antimony, one of the ingredients of the enamel. This metal is the basis of tartar emetic, a medicine long in use to induce vomiting in croup and in some other disorders.

Much of the supposed lead poisoning formerly fairly prevalent in the printing trade was due to antimony, an ingredient of printing type. There is no dispute as to the possibilities of harm from antimony. He says that ordinary gray enamel contains 3 per cent and up to 7 per cent of this metal. All metals are in some measure poisonous—some more, some less. Even those that are most necessary for health are poisonous if they get into the tissues in excess.

Another truth is that all metals are dissolved in small part by watery fluids that are kept in contact with them. As a rule a sour fluid dissolves more metal than one that is not sour and a hot fluid more than a cold one. Vinegar, lemon juice, and sour liquids of that family are not to be compared with mineral acids as a solvent of metals, but even these very mild sours are better solvents than plain water.

In this case the large gray enamel vessel was in contact with a warm dilute acid for several hours, and it is probable that in that time enough antimony went into solution to cause poisoning.

Dr. Wagner is authority for the statement that the enamels used in cooking utensils contain no lead, though that metal is still an ingredient of the enamels used in bath tubs, sinks, and bowls. There is no argument against its use for this purpose. There are granite ware enamels that contain no antimony and certain enamels are regarded as acid-proof, but the ordinary garden variety contain antimony and are not acid-proof.

When it comes to household practice there is a difference between theoretic danger and practical danger. If one has a phobia against metals he will be afraid of any food that has been in contact with any metal of any sort, anywhere, at any time. He may even be afraid of foods that have been in contact with glass, since he may hear that in certain very delicate laboratory processes fluids cannot be kept in glass because of the particles of glass that are always found in suspension, and also because of the chemicals in glass that go into solution.

There is academic danger in everything we do, in every contact we make. But there is no reason why we cannot adopt and follow safe practices in the use of metal food utensils, including cans for foods. To be safe, one should not cook foods made sour by vinegar or lemon juice in graniteware or in uncoated metal utensils, and then leave the food or drink in the vessels for several hours. If foods are to be kept it is safer to transfer them rather promptly to glass vessels. This is especially true of some sour stuff. Storing in metal that has been coated with lacquer is safe.

LIABILITY FOR INJURIES.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Our club maintains a children's playground. The ground is owned by the Chicago board of education, for which we have a permit to use. We wish to inquire if the club officers or individual members are liable in case some child is injured on equipment owned by the club. The club is chartered by the state of Illinois. C. P. M.

No. The mere fact that a person is an officer or member would not render him liable for torts of the corporation or its agents. Some participation in the act complained of must be brought home to him. See 4 Ill. App. 463. Even the club would not be liable without proof of negligence.

TEST CASE IN COURT.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—This is a case where a will was not made, an administrator appointed, and property probated through court. As guardian of my sister's son, a minor, I deposited money belonging to him in a bank that failed. The bank book is stamped "Probate Court." 1. Do I have to pay him in full when he becomes of age? 2. Or must we take the 10 per cent or whatever amount is paid? H. M.

1. No.

2. As we understand it, a test case is being taken to the Illinois Supreme court to determine the question whether such accounts are entitled to priority.

NEW PAVING NECESSARY.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—[Friend of the People.]—Can you tell me when 83d street between Burley and Green Bay avenues can be repaired? The street is very rough, breaking springs on automobiles and also throwing wheels out of alignment, making it dangerous for pedestrians. C. H.

Eighty-third street between Burley and Green Bay avenues is an old macadam street paved twenty-five years ago. The remedy for present condition is the construction of a new pavement. Repair work for the season of 1932 will soon be drawing to a close, dependent upon weather conditions.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

NOVEMBER 21, 1916.

LONDON.—The entente allies and their forces in Greece have taken a further step toward control of the government of King Constantine. Reuter's Athens correspondent says that Vice Admiral du Fournet has notified the Austrian, German, Bulgarian, and Turkish ministers to Greece that they must go aboard a steamer which has been placed at their disposal; otherwise they will be taken forcibly. The Daily Mail's Athens correspondent says: "The immediate cause of the expulsion of the ministers was the discovery that the German naval attaché, Baron von Senarclens-Grancy, was engaged in espionage." The American legation, the correspondent adds, has undertaken the protection of the Austrians, Turks, and Bulgars in Greece, while the Spanish legation will take charge of Germany's interests.

LONDON.—A severe Rumanian defeat, which may be a disaster, is indicated by today's German official report. German and Austrian troops are approaching Craiova, the capital of western Wallachia and one of Rumania's largest cities. Two Rumanian armies, of combined strength estimated at more than 100,000 men, are imperiled by this situation. The army at Orsova appears to be cut off, while the army in the Jiul valley is in danger of a flanking attack. Craiova's fall would mean that the Teutons had practically conquered one-third of Wallachia, or some 6,000 square miles of Rumanian soil.

LONDON.—The allied troops have been completely victorious from Cerna to Lake Presba on the Macedonian front, according to official reports issued here and in Paris. The Paris statement says that, following the entry of the French into Monastir, they moved northward and captured Hill 821 and the villages of Kirklina, Karamand, and Orizar. The retreat of the German-Bulgarian forces from Monastir is a debacle, says a dispatch to the Wireless Press from Rome. The entente troops are pursuing the fleeing foe and taking many prisoners as they advance.

BERLIN.—The war office statement dealing with operations on the western front says: "The British artillery fire was in general diminished yesterday. Only along the Ancre, on both sides of the river, was it heavy. Between Serre and Beaucourt and against our positions south of Miraumont attacks were launched which failed with heavy losses to the enemy. The French again attempted to enter St. Pierre Vaast wood from the northwest. They were repulsed, although their attack was made with fresh forces and prepared by strong fire."

CHICAGO.—New interest was lent to the disappearance of Matthew Dick and Paul Martin, two Chicago youths who left Yale university on Nov. 4 with the intention of carving out their own futures without family aid, when messages were received in Chicago that the boys had been found. A message to THE TRIBUNE from Prince Albert, Sask., said: "Matthew Dick and Paul Martin, sons Chicago wealthy men, missing from Yale, found lumber camp north this city."

INDIANAPOLIS.—The National Women's Christian Temperance union, in annual session here, today adopted a resolution commending the 850 daily newspapers and 68 magazines in the country known to refuse liquor advertisements. The delegates pledged themselves and each member of the organization to use influence in every way possible in their respective communities to get newspapers now carrying such advertising matter to drop it at the expiration of present contracts.

INTEREST ON SAVINGS.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—We are informed that the Chicago clearing house contemplates a reduction from 3 per cent to 2 per cent or 2½ per cent in the savings interest rate paid by Chicago banks. I believe that at this juncture the depositor's side should receive consideration.

Under rules obtaining in the Chicago district a 3 per cent rate on savings does not mean that over a period of six months banks pay at the rate of 3 per cent per annum for the money they have. Penalizing the depositor who withdraws his money between interest dates, Jan. 1 and July 1, result in some periods in reducing actual cost to the banks to approximately 2¼ per cent. Rules covering loss of interest by the depositor when he withdraws his funds during an interest period are much more stringent in Illinois than in many eastern states.

Because of the competitive influence of the Mutual Savings bank rate in the east savings there receive a higher rate than is paid in Chicago.

If savings deposits in Chicago were segregated and invested solely in bonds eligible for the investment of savings in states like New York and Massachusetts, the 3 per cent rate, even in the present depression, could be maintained without loss to the banks. It is the mingling of these funds with the funds derived from commercial deposits, and the employment of same in making commercial loans with attendant losses, and in purchasing commercial paper carrying right now a very low rate of interest, that make a 3 per cent interest rate appear high.

The legislature should recognize and establish the difference between savings deposits and commercial deposits and between the two classes of depositors. Savings depositors as a rule are not financiers nor are they educated in the ways of business. They need and deserve special protection under the law. The uses to which savings can be applied should be prescribed by statute. If in the future we again have a wholesale closing of banks as in the past two years the savings of the people should be exempt from disaster.

Banks should be so geared that they can always welcome the receipt of savings deposits. While selective investments may make this possible in the future, when the principles have been changed, the immediate problem can be solved in other ways than through the reduction of the interest rate. Banks can require that an account shall be of a certain size before any interest is paid. They can limit the amount that can be deposited by an individual in any one bank, establishing $5,000 or some other sum as the maximum. They can still further stiffen the requirements covering the withdrawal of money. Some of these things are undesirable, but all are possible alternatives to an interest rate reduction.

The Chicago savings rates should be nonfluctuating through the years, stabilized at a figure which will give banks a chance for a fair profit most of the time, and which might entail for them a small loss in periods like the present; a loss which could be avoided, however, through change in methods instead of change in rate.

During the thirteen years the writer has lived in Chicago there have been two periods when banks could invest savings funds and obtain an almost fabulous return. Was any thought given to a possible increase in the savings rate? No. Neither should a rate reduction now be considered when "prosperity is just around the corner." Three per cent is a fair all-time rate.

EX-BANKER.

THE LONGEST RIVER.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 14.—I am writing to call your attention to a serious oversight that is being made in the recent appropriations of both the state and the nation. That is, funds that should have been set aside for the improvement of the navigation up Salt river.

Salt river is the longest river in the western hemisphere. It crosses all the states and runs through all the districts. It has recently undermined great portions of all Republican constituencies. Therefore it is their duty to make this appropriation with the customary economy, which is now so well known because of the purgative thoroughness with which it has evacuated and exudated all public treasuries, whether county, municipal, state or national.

This bill must carry the emergency clause: "This money to be available and expended before the inauguration of 1933."

I do not think Democrats will seriously oppose this appropriation. They are, and always have been, kind at heart. There is no desire to leave unnecessary hardships in the way of those who, sadly unskilled in seamanship, must take passage up Salt river in 1933. Democrats have had past experience in its navigation. They are fully aware that its depths are beset with snags, its rapids choked with drift, and the detours inundated with quicksand.

Will you please call this oversight to the immediate attention of our "lame duck" appropriators at the earliest possible date. H. H. HOLT.

SALARIES.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—In today's CHICAGO TRIBUNE there appeared an interesting chart showing the amount of live stock required to pay the salaries of Washington bureau heads in 1932 as compared with 1920. The prevailing annual salary during that period increased from $5,000 to $8,500 and in 1932 was reduced to $7,792.

THE TRIBUNE might go a step further in championing the people's rights by setting forth just how much live stock would be required to pay high salaried executives, such as Samuel Insull's annual salary of $500,000 or the salaries of railroad executives, which in some cases are as high as $140,000.

In the final analysis these exorbitant salaries are paid by the consuming public—whether in the form of taxes or excessive costs of commodities. If the huge salary paid to Mr. Insull alone were divided into equal allotments of $6,637 [the average salary of bureau heads during the period in question] it would have been distributed among 753 families. Is there any justification for paying one man for the mismanagement of the people's business an annual salary sufficient to maintain 753 families in far more than average comfort? Is this very thing not at the bottom of our difficulties? G. H. H.

THE MEETING AT WASHINGTON.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Many of us who are not qualified to pass on the problems of state involved in the collection of foreign debts will cull a wholesome lesson from the action of our two Presidents, evidencing their willingness to come together for a friendly chat so soon after the close of the recent vigorous campaign, an incident which at least in one essential respect stamps both men as worthy of the honor conferred upon them by their country and an augury that the form of our policy is moving in the right direction. It is an example that will live and exert an influence on the public and private life of the country. J. J. ODIL.

Britons Split; Fear or Hope for Default.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Great Britain is as much interested in the outcome of Tuesday's conference between President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt at the White House on the proposed debt moratorium extension as she was a fortnight ago in the presidential election.

From the viewpoint of the debtor states, there is even more at stake now. In the opinion of financial and political authorities of London there is much more involved than whether Britain pays on Dec. 15 or defaults or gets a moratorium from the United States congress. There is even more involved than the general question of debt revision.

Grave Danger Seen.

As these men see it, there is grave danger that both political and economic relations between the United States and Great Britain will be seriously impaired for a long time to come if either government makes a false move in the next critical three weeks. They are frankly anxious lest Britain drift into a default without intending to, and without America really intending to force her into such a catastrophe.

Each government between now and Dec. 15 will wait to see what the other will do in the last minute to avert a crisis. There is no three days' grace period in the provision for payments of war debt installments. This fear of a drift to a default through delay is seriously entertained by the people of Britain.

There is one important difference so far as the procedure in the two capitals is concerned. The United States government cannot grant a postponement of payment without the authority of congress. On the other hand, the British government already has full authority to pay without the consent of parliament.

Congress Versus Commons.

Increasing pressure is being brought to bear on parliament to get the cabinet to reconsider its determination not to default if the United States refuses to grant a delay. So there is a possibility that the situation may develop into a duel between the United States congress and the British house of commons.

In some British quarters there is not a fear but a hope there will be a default. That outcome would please a considerable group of backbench Conservative members of commons. It would also be hailed by an increasing number of manufacturers, merchants, and industrial towns of north England as the best means of escape from a burden which they think has become intolerable and unjustifiable. The question they are asking each other and their representatives in parliament is:

"Would debt repudiation under the present circumstances be any greater blow to the financial integrity of this country than was our abandonment of the gold standard last year?"

Prediction of "Bad Times."

If there is a default, or a forced payment, or even a moratorium grudgingly granted after acrimonious debate in the United States and British legislatures, without subsequent re-examination of the whole debt question, a bad time is predicted for both countries by statesmen and financiers of Great Britain. There would be monetary wars and tariffs wars, they fear. The pound would depreciate still more, they warn, and countries now off the gold standard would rally round Britain in consolidating a sterling bloc against the countries on the gold standard.

CYPRUS SUBMITS TO BRITISH RULE BUT EYES COSTS

Little Concerned with Law Reforms.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NIKOSIA, Cyprus, Nov. 20.—The disillusioned inhabitants of Cyprus, who lost most of their political prerogatives after the unsuccessful revolt of October, 1931, have assumed an attitude of resignation toward the constitution that is now being framed for them in London. Government extravagance constitutes their main grievance.

The island of Cyprus, in the eastern corner of the Mediterranean, is within commuting distance of Kyrenia, Asia Minor, 45 miles to the north. Overnight boats reach Syria and Palestine, a little farther to the east. Most traffic goes to Port Said [Suez], 240 miles to the south. The island of 3,584 square miles supports 348,000 inhabitants: 64,000 Moslems and 276,000 of the Greek orthodox church.

Long Run by Bosses.

The Cypriotes—as the residents are called—by now are accustomed to submission. Cyprus of old was bossed by the Greeks and Phoenicians, then the Turks came along and ran the island. The British took it from the Turks "for administrative purposes" in 1878 and used the world war as an excuse to gobble it without reservation. It was made a crown colony in 1925. Greek and Turkish dialects are spoken, but English is rapidly gaining.

Cypriotes today are concerned more with economics than politics. Prohibition of the Greek flag, censorship of foreign periodicals and suspension of all clubs they bear without protest, but revenue spending, in which they have small voice, is another matter.

The Cypriote has become aware of the increase by leaps in government expenditure today compared with five years ago. He has discovered that much money goes into the pockets of so-called experts in irrigation, mycology, parasitology, entomology and into projects such as forest conservation and experimental farms. Here the Cypriote waxes indignant for he sees what the administrators seem unwilling to see, that a host of luxurious undertakings must be scrapped if the budget is to be balanced.

Revamping Constitution.

Elections to choose members of the island's legislative council were the occasion for unscrupulous agitation of the population by the various native candidates. Britain recognized this as a cause of the revolt last year and abolished the elections and also the legislative council, which had but three native members.

Several Cypriote representatives and the new governor, Sir Reginald Stubbs, are conferring in London with Sir Ronald Storrs, whom Stubbs succeeds, on the constitutional question. Sir Reginald is expected here in December armed with power to establish the changes decided upon.

Cyprus at present is governed by an executive council including four resident British officials and one non-official member. The legislature, which was abolished, included nine British officials of the island and 15 inhabitants. The local members were elective, three reserved to Moslem voters and 12 to those of other faiths.

HUNGRY PUPILS OPEN A VISITOR'S EYES AND PURSE

Business Man Views the Situation.

"In my day school was never like this," said a business man recently as he stood in the basement lunchroom of a Chicago school and watched white faced boys and girls eating the hearty lunch provided by the hungry school children's fund. He shook his head and went out thoughtfully. Later he walked into a TRIBUNE public service office to leave a donation that would help out that lunchroom.

"You know," he said, "we older folks have been preaching for a long time to the youngsters about what a hard time we used to have when the little red schoolhouse was in its heyday. Maybe we did put up with a few drafts and maybe we didn't have all the advantages of modern buildings, but we always had enough clothes to keep us warm and plenty of food to keep us healthy.

"What the boys and girls I saw this noon know about hard times makes me ashamed to think I ever bragged about the ordeals of my own childhood. I guess I was just a softie and didn't know it. Anyway, it's been a long time since I had any occasion to count the pennies and now that I know where some of them will do the most good here's something to help out that fund to keep half starved kids in school."

Not all the donations to keep the fund operating and feeding thousands of needy children each noon on school days are as readily available for the purpose. Some are apportioned out of the small salaries of stenographers and clerks. Some represent the sacrifice of birthday gifts or part of a payment for minor odd jobs.

Contributions should be addressed to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE, Tribune Tower.

Third Brother Slain by Gangsters in Brooklyn

New York, Nov. 20.—(AP)—Gangsters shot and killed Joe Fabrizzo, 25, in Manhattan last June. They trussed up Andrew Fabrizzo, 24, in a sack and dumped him out of a car dead at Morristown, N. J., last August. They got a third brother tonight. Francis Anthony Fabrizzo, 40, was eating supper when three men called at his Brooklyn flat and said they wanted to see him. Fabrizzo stepped out into the hall. His family heard three shots and ran out to find him dead on the floor.

OLD CHECKER CAB HEADS PLAN NEW TAXI COMPANY

Robert E. McLaughlin, former president of the Checker Taxi company, announced yesterday that he had obtained papers of incorporation for a new taxicab company.

Associated with him are Harry Gordon and Max Raifman, who were lieutenants of McLaughlin in the old Checker company, and Clifford J. Gordon. Their company, the Century Cab company, will have 1,500 cabs on the street by the time the World's Fair opens, their statement asserted. They plan to charge 15 cents for the first one-third mile and 5 cents per third mile thereafter.

These are the same rates now charged by the Public Taxi Service company, which has 22 cabs in operation. The Public company met opposition from the public vehicle license commission, of which Lieut. James Killackey is secretary, in putting its cabs on the street, and was permitted to operate temporarily, until the council acts on an ordinance revising the taxicab regulations of the city, only after Ald. James B. Bowler [36th] and other members of the city council had intervened.

Under the so-called "monopoly ordinance" now in effect, companies or individuals desiring to put new cabs on the street must show that public convenience and necessity require more cabs. Last February a proposal was made, but not passed, in the city council that the number of cabs in Chicago be limited to 5,200.

RUMANIA TAXES BREAD AS FARM AID; POOR SUFFER

Only Taxeaters Benefit from Scheme.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST, Nov. 20.—The government of Rumania has concluded that no man made law, no matter how ingenious, can keep up the prices of grain. The Rumanians, in a desperate effort to help the farmers, who form 85 per cent of their population, have tried just about all the ways and means so far devised by man, including a tax on bread. All have failed.

They tried to copy the United States farm board. A bill was pushed through parliament providing for the establishment of a "national grain marketing board," modeled after the American organization. The ministry of finance was ordered to put at the disposal of the board a working fund of $2,400,000 annually. Rumor has it that the finance minister learned of the plight of the United States farm bord. Anyway, the necessary operating fund was never forthcoming, and the "national grain marketing board" passed away unnoticed and unmourned.

Bonus Fails.

Previously the government had attempted to pay a bonus to wheat growers out of the funds provided by the bread tax, one of the most despised taxes in this tax ridden country. The tax continues, but the farmers have not benefited much from it and it has added a heavy burden on the shoulders of the poor.

Not one loaf of bread, white or black, can be sold in Rumania without a government stamp on its crust. The bread tax was fastened on the people by the Jorga-Argetoianu government, effective July 23, 1931. On every two pound loaf of dark bread a stamp of one lei [two-thirds of a cent] had to be affixed. For white bread the tax amounted to 1.50 lei [one cent] for a two pound loaf.

The bread tax was supposed to supply funds to pay grain dealers a premium of $6 a metric ton on exported wheat and $8 a metric ton on exported flour. The farmer was to benefit by the higher price which the grain exporters would be able to pay him.

Premium Stops; Tax Goes On.

In October, 1931, however, the government ceased to pay premiums on grain exports. The hated bread tax continued, some $240,000 a month coming into the national treasury from this source. But the government would not admit defeat. Instead of receiving money, the wheat exporters were given "payment orders" and today the government owes them more than $3,600,000.

The exporters, of course, had offered the peasants higher prices only on the strength of the premiums and failing to receive these, they have been unable to meet their payments to the farmers, who, in the end, are the principal sufferers.

Meantime, the price of bread in Rumania continues to rise due in part to one of the worst grain crops since the war. The government has also passed a bill establishing an import tax of $25 a ton on wheat and rye and $37.50 a ton on wheat and rye flour. This action is defended on the ground that importing wheat or flour would affect adversely the country's trade balance. Another bill has been introduced in parliament compelling the public to observe two wheatless days a week.

As a result of these measures bread prices have jumped up two-thirds of a cent a loaf. Thus with the increase due to the bread tax, bread is almost twice as expensive as it used to be. For families whose wage earners average only $25 to $40 a month and consume at least a loaf and a half or two loaves of bread a day, the increase is considered a real hardship.

CHILEAN OPERA GIRLS WIN EIGHT HOUR SINGING DAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 20.—The ludicrous side of advanced social legislation in South America was exemplified in a recent lawsuit in the Chilean courts. The labor code here demands that an employé, manual or "white collar," must work eight hours a day and stipulates that if there is any attempt on the employer's part to reduce the time he shall be held to have dismissed the worker and be liable for indemnities.

Fourteen opera girl singers brought a suit against their impresarios under this law. They were entitled, they said, to sing eight hours a day.

In rebutting the claim the impresarios stated that the girls could not be allowed to sing for eight hours, because some of them had poor voices and were howled down every time they appeared on the stage. The judge, adhering to the letter of the law, held that the girls should sing eight hours a day, but as the defendants had complained of the quality of their service, which was equivalent to dismissal, he awarded compensation to the singers in accordance with the indemnity clause of the labor code—a month's salary for every year of service.

MACIA LEADING IN FIRST CATALAN SELF-RULE VOTE

President's Party Slated to Retain Power.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BARCELONA, Spain, Nov. 20.—While no official results have been issued, all available reports indicate that President Francisco Macia and the Catalan party of the left won a majority of the 85 deputies in parliament in the elections today.

Despite the enthusiasm aroused by the first election of parliament since the Spanish republic restored the autonomy for which Catalonia has been fighting ceaselessly for two centuries, the polling took place without a single disturbance.

Col. Macia's party claims 65,000 votes in Barcelona, which is slightly more than 50 per cent of their poll in the elections to the national parliament June 19, 1931. The party is understood to be leading in all the other four districts except Tarragona, where the outcome is doubtful.

The Regionalist party of Francisco Cambo and the Radical Republicans of Alejandro Lerroux trailed the Macia organization, with the former apparently registering considerable gains. The out and out separatists and communists fared badly.

Fate of Rich Duke in Balance.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Spain, Nov. 20—Whether the duke of Alba, probably the wealthiest of Spain's former grandees, will be imprisoned when he arrives in Madrid tomorrow may depend on the protests of republican intellectuals in his favor.

The duke is expected from Paris in response to a government order requiring his presence in Madrid within 10 days from Nov. 11 to be "heard in the inquiry being carried out concerning the committing of acts and aggressions against the republic."

The intellectual elements cite the duke's well known liberalism and notable work for Spanish cultural bodies as reasons for tolerating him.

The duke of Miranda, high chamberlain of the royal households, and Vicomte Florestan Aguilar, former King Alfonso's dentist, are among 27 other monarchists supposed to appear in Madrid before midnight tomorrow.

Abbott, 6930 Stewart avenue, and by one daughter, Mrs. W. L. Pattison, 419 Belmont avenue.

INDIGESTION kept him awake!

Not "something he ate" but a seriously clogged condition of his intestines was to blame

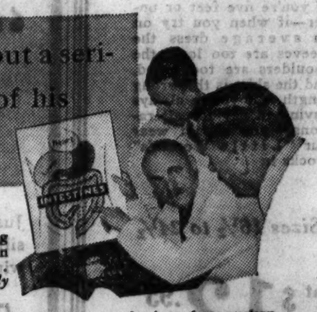
DOG-TIRED. Aching for rest. How often have you felt that way . . . only to find you simply couldn't get to sleep?

You blamed it on worrying thoughts, perhaps. Excitement. "Something you ate." But doctors have discovered that so often the real cause of sleeplessness is sluggish intestines!

Intestines clogged with waste spread poisons through your system . . . upsetting your stomach. And as a result really restful sleep is practically impossible.

How Yeast Helps

Doctors warn you—avoid cathartics. They're habit-forming. They irritate the intestinal tissues . . . weaken the muscles . . . actually aggravate the stagnant condition of your intestines in the long run.



Doctors warn of poisons from unclean intestines. They advise fresh yeast.

Instead, doctors advise, eat yeast regularly . . . fresh yeast. That is the sensible way.

Made a part of your daily diet, Fleischmann's fresh Yeast gradually strengthens the intestines . . . stimulates normal action. At the same time it softens the clogging wastes . . . makes them easy to get rid of. Excess poisons go.

Why not stop this cause of sleeplessness by eating Fleischmann's Yeast—from today on? You can get it at grocers, restaurants, and soda fountains. Directions are on the label.

AN UPSET STOMACH and sleepless nights are usually signs of constipation! Correct this evil. Eat Fleischmann's Yeast!

Carswell Book on Lawrence Issued in U.S.

Posthumous Work Is Also Published.

"The Savage Pilgrimage," by Catherine Carswell. [Harcourt-Brace.]
"Etruscan Places," by D. H. Lawrence. [Viking.]

"THE SAVAGE PILGRIMAGE," a polemic biography of D. H. Lawrence, shortly after its publication in England was withdrawn by the publishers because of possible libel suits. With but a few alterations the American edition is almost identical to the English one, as American laws for libel are very different from those in England.

D. H. LAWRENCE.

Catherine Carswell, one of the few permanent friends in D. H. Lawrence's life, is signally qualified to write his biography. From the time of his first writing for publication to the end of his life she was his confidante and regular correspondent.

"The Savage Pilgrimage" is not a biography in the conventional sense; it is more a spirited and sympathetic interpretation of a compelling personality. D. H. Lawrence during his lifetime aroused more bitter personal and critical opposition and more passionate vindication than any other writer of his generation. Though he is dead, the battle is still being waged and has extended to and includes those who attempt an analysis of his gifts as a person and as a literary genius. For instance, the stir created by J. Middleton Murry's "Son of Woman" is proof of this.

Catherine Carswell's view of Lawrence is antithetical to Middleton Murry's. Instead of a man obsessed by a mother complex and its consequences, haunted, tortured, and confused, as pictured by the author of "Son of Woman," she sees him as an artist whose view of life was characterized by his awareness and his clarity of vision. According to Catherine Carswell, D. H. Lawrence knew always exactly what he was doing, that his "world view" was consistent, growing not from a thwarted and contorted consciousness but from one that was abnormally sensitive, though perfectly whole and sure.

"The Savage Pilgrimage" is a stimulating book, one that is vastly important to the understanding of Lawrence, and a biography that makes clear to the reader, no matter what his personal interpretation of Lawrence, the genius and strangeness of one of the most significant literary personalities of this generation.

"Etruscan Places" is a posthumous work. Those who preach of Lawrence's literary decline in his later years under the pressure of tuberculosis should by no means miss this final expression of his genius. It is not so restrained and perfect in technical form, so resigned as "The Man Who Died," but it contains none of the frenzy, the mysticism of many of the novels he wrote in early middle life.

In each literary form he chose the essence of his personal philosophy was always and sometimes disproportionately apparent. "Etruscan Places" falls under the category of travel literature, of which "The Sea and Sardinia" was so eminent an example. There are few people writing today who can catch the smell and feel the personality of places as vividly and unaffectedly as Lawrence could when he wanted to.

It is not surprising to the student of Lawrence that he should be attracted to the culture of the Etruscans. This race, about whom so little is known—even the language is indecipherable—inhabiting central Italy long before the Romans came to power, left to the world as monuments to their culture marvelous tombs. Unlike the warlike Romans, who were, according to Lawrence, soulless and burdened by dead laws, the Etruscans were gay, youthful people, sensitive to the beauties of this world and the human life within it.

In this book Lawrence wanders through ancient Etruria, visiting all the tombs he can, allowing his brilliant imagination to play over what he sees in them and giving to the reader an unforgettable picture of the inner life of the people.

Writing in a style that is at times so vivid and rich and unique that the reader despairs of finding its equal in contemporary literature, describing and interpreting a past his philosophy can so readily understand, Lawrence gives his last message to a world he hatefully considered "supercivilized."

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

There's quite a story to the making of this all star opus.

It started out to be just the pictured yarn of a multi-millionaire, supposed to be on his last legs, who decides to give away seven million [omigosh!] to seven persons whose names he chooses at random from a city directory. Simple enough you'd think. But—next thing anybody knew, seven directors were directing seven different episodes, 30 staff writers were feverishly at work, and an onlooker, judging from the activities on the Paramount stages, would have sworn that at least a million players were acting in "If I Had a Million."

The result of all this enterprise is a composite cinema affording you a glimpse into assorted lives that are variously affected by John Glidden's eccentric generosity.

Charles Ruggles impersonates amusingly Henry Peabody, a clerk in a china store. He's fear ridden at work for fear he'll break things and wife ridden at home because his fear is forever being realized with resultant dockings. The dream of Henry's life is to raise rabbits. Enters Mr. J. Glidden with check in hand . . . ! But before he starts raising the rabbits, Mr. Peabody spends one last, crowded, happy hour in the china store.

Then there's a disillusioned lady of the evening who encounters Mr. Glidden and—well, never mind. . . . Others to benefit—and otherwise—by the unexpected checks are a forger, a youth sentenced to the electric chair, a one time vaudeville actress, a filing clerk, a marine, and a lonely old lady in a home for the aged.

The major rôles are all most effectively portrayed and minor ones are nicely handled.

Directions—and I mean it with the "s"—are capable, though a bit drawn out in several instances, and the stories, sad, humorous, tragic, are for the most part interesting. John Glidden is hardly a credible character, arising as he does, practically from his coffin, to stalk, unaccompanied, over highways and byways and end up eating mince pie and dating Mrs. Walker of the Old Ladies' home. All right for a farce—but I don't believe that "If I Had a Million" started out to be a farce.

They are serving tea and cookies in the lounge of the Chicago after each performance. Life grows wonderfuller and wonderfuller.

See you tomorrow!

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT? BY H. A. RIDLEY

Copyright, 1932, by Ivers Syndicate, Inc.

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his casebook covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

Try your wits on it! It takes but ONE MINUTE to read! Every fact and every clew necessary to its solution is in the story itself—and there is only one answer. How good a detective are you?

DEATH GOES SAILING.

Prof. Fordney was visiting an artist friend in Holland when word was brought of a tragedy on the boat of some Americans about a mile away. Rowing down the winding, deserted river through the flat, low country, he rounded a bend and saw a sailboat about 300 yards ahead moored to the right bank.

On board he was greeted by Dr. Melrose. Before listening to his story he went aft and examined the body of a man who sat slumped over the wheel, a bullet hole through his head.

Melrose told him the two were on a leisurely sailing cruise. Jackson had risen early that morning and gotten the boat under way. Melrose went on deck at quarter to eight to announce breakfast and Jackson said he'd be down shortly. When he hadn't appeared at ten minutes after eight Melrose went up on deck again just as they came opposite an old windmill about 200 yards back in the direction from which Fordney had come. He was horrified to see him slumped over the wheel. His examination disclosed that Jackson must have been shot just after he left him. He'd been dead at least twenty minutes. One hand grasped the wheel which Melrose had removed in order to moor the boat.

Melrose claimed he'd heard no shot and was completely mystified by the tragedy. Ascertaining the speed of the boat had been about two miles an hour, that there was no gun on board, and after finding three bullets in Jackson's cabin Fordney believed Melrose was implicated.

WHY?

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

"Merry Go Round," the play that foretold the downfall of New York's Jimmy Walker and, for that honest act of prophecy, was officially bullied off the Broadway stage, had its Chicago première at the Adelphi theater last night. With this production Charles Freeman, director of dramatic activities at the Jewish People's institute, makes his bow as a professional impresario, seeking manfully to alleviate the stage famine in this city.

In selecting "Merry Go Round" for his debut as a manager and stage director, Mr. Freeman handed himself a severe assignment. This piece is a realistic melodrama, in the cinema pattern, calling for thirty-three characters and eighteen changes of scene. Its mechanism requires the revolving stage which was so much in fashion last season, and its long series of brief, staccato episodes must run like a ribbon if the promise of swift and tragic action that the manuscript carries is to be fulfilled.

Mr. Freeman's actors were in excellent first night form, missing a cue now and then to demonstrate that this was an opening performance, but otherwise up to the standards for gangsters, molls, district attorneys, detectives, Tammany bosses, Jimmy Walkers, unfortunate bell boys, etc. But Mr. Freeman's scenery was distinctly on its bad behavior. The elaborate scheme of scene changes, blackouts, light cues and all the other gadgets that stage managers have to worry about was not in smooth working order, and the swift ribbon of drama that the play should have been became a jerky ticker tape in a dull day on the stock exchange.

So what we saw at the Adelphi last night was a performance that had not yet found its legs. It wabbled extensively; it creaked, and jittered, and dragged. I believe, however, that these faults are not chronic, and that "Merry Go Round" [an ironical title] will soon find its pace.

The play has the Seabury investigation, which unseated Mayor Walker, in its background; and in its foreground a bitter and savage tale about a hotel bellboy who got caught in the sinister machine of gangsters and politicians, and so perished horribly. It is a piece of sensational reporting which has borrowed its method from "Five Star Final" and various other skittering melodramas on topics of the day. If you are a reformer it will arouse your crusader's rage; if you are a politician or a police officer you will proclaim it an exaggeration of the facts; and if you are a merry playgoer, seeking to refresh your soul, it may depress you.

Its torture scene, representing a brutal police third degree to make an innocent man confess to murder, was an extremely painful business for me. Being a critic, and therefore tender-hearted, I hate torture scenes in the theater. They arouse in me a wholesome desire to kill an author.

The tricks that embellish this curiosity of the drama include a lighted panel above the proscenium arch upon which there is lettered, in news bulletin style, a running account of the story and its sidelights. I cannot testify concerning the effectiveness of this device, because from the angle at which I stared up at the inscriptions they seemed to be in Bulgarian, one of the languages with which I am not familiar. I stopped looking at it and felt that I wasn't missing anything.

Another bit of jazz stage direction was an unseen noise-making machine which, during the pauses between scene-changes, mooed like a musical walrus in the mating season. I do not know what was intended—something symbolic and soul-piercing, no doubt. But I am strongly in favor of its elimination.

About one-third of the cast of thirty-three should be given fairly honorable mention. Mr. Freeman has done well in selecting his types, and there doesn't seem to be an amateur or little theater actor in the company.

Special Wrapping Counter Wins Approval.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Just how much do you know about your Chicago shops and stores, especially all you shop hounds who, according to the best critics, manage to spend nearly every day in the same store? Have you prowled around and discovered all the special corners that are filled with interesting possibilities for keeping female shoppers more than satisfied with the thoughtful services all these modern shop keepers so cleverly extend?

Have you noticed how one huge store has managed to save wear and tear on your anatomy, time and patience by assembling all manner of gift ideas in one section . . . a most accessible section for the dieting shopper who can easily lose a pound or two by briskly dashing up a few stairs, or the slim person who can be lazy and arrive in this alluring spot after a swift and short swoop in the elevator.

However you get to this place, you can stay and have a grand time buying for your entire Christmas list without leaving the floor. You'll find everything from ash trays to table linens.

Wrapping for Gifts.

Another service that should be ballyhooed extensively is the wrapping and boxing department . . . a perfect nook for the clumsy bundle wrappers with good intentions and lots of imagination. Here you can lug all your Christmas, birthday, and any other gifts, select your paper yourself, try out all your wildest color schemes and have a nimble fingered gal wrap them all and all you do is pay for the wrappings.

And if you think this service stunt isn't fully appreciated stand around and watch the weary and goggle-eyed shoppers arrive with an armful of funny looking parcels and depart later with the best looking, most alluring and well wrapped assortment you have ever longed to open, hoping to see what glamorous thing was inside.

This package wrapping service is available all the year around . . . you'll find the largest assortment of colored and fancy papers outside a paper house . . . you'll see enough bolts of ribbon and gauze to tie up congress for a year . . . you'll see boxes of every size, from wee little round things to hold a powder puff up to long slinky things that are made for umbrellas and huge square affairs for dishes, lamps, and pottery.

All Kinds of Boxes.

You can take a couple of kerchiefs and have them packed to suit a queen, in a box of midnight blue sprinkled with tiny sparkling silver stars, then wrapped with gold paper and tied with jade green gauze. You can have a package wrapped and boxed so alluringly that when it arrives at its destination the admiring owner scarcely dares to disturb its glowing splendor by opening.

You can go modern and select paper with wild red gazelles leaping over wide open spaces of white, or paper splashes with the prize collection of dots in a score of brilliant colors, or paper striped and plaid and check, and delightful papers with funny little dogs and cats and bunnies careening around the corners and centers.

You can use ribbon or gauze or tinsel effects with rows of trees, spired churches, jolly old St. Nicks, reindeers, and carol singers wandering over each inch . . . or you can find all the lovely old fashioned shades of green, deep blue, scarlet, purple, and gold in solid colors and as a grand gesture you can wrap your gifts in silver or gold. And you can find all these intriguing outside layers filling the shelves of these wrapping sections at this time of the year, like a well filled plum pudding.

Count and Countess Visconti to Visit Relatives for Holidays

Fomer Edith Fairbanks and Husband Will Arrive on Dec. 8 to Spend Christmas in City.

BY JUDITH CASS.

NO VISITORS to Chicago during the Christmas holidays, when hospitality waxes warmest, will be more heartily welcomed than the former Edith Fairbanks and her husband, the Count Ruggero Visconti de Modrone of Milan, Italy. They are expected to arrive about the 8th of December to spend Christmas with the countess' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren C. Fairbanks and her sister, Miss Cornelia Fairbanks, of 1500 Lake Shore drive.

What is more—debutantes please take note—the visitors are to be accompanied by Count Emanuele Barromeo, a young Italian who is said to possess good looks, charm, and all the other dashing qualities which go to make men popular. His family is an old and prominent one, and owns the famous Barromeo island on Lake Maggiore.

Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks have been occupying their Indianapolis residence since they returned this fall with Miss Cornelia from a summer visit with the Viscontis in Italy, but they will return to Chicago in time for the arrival of their son-in-law and daughter.

Mrs. Fairbanks and Miss Cornelia Fairbanks are to give a luncheon on Sunday, Dec. 11, at the Saddle and Cycle club for three of the season's debutantes, Miss Mary Reed, Miss Lydia Swift, and Miss Laura Thorne.

Count and Countess Visconti have resided in Milan since their marriage a year ago last June.

Small Dinner for Miss Patterson.

Invitations are out for a small dinner that Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson will give on Saturday, Dec. 17, for their daughter, Josephine, at their apartment, 209 Lake Shore drive. Miss Patterson's debut will take place on Friday, Dec. 30, when the Pattersons will give a ball at the Blackstone hotel to introduce their daughter.

Mrs. Patterson expects that their other two daughters, Mrs. Griffith Mark and Mrs. Joseph Brooks, and their husbands will be here from New York for the ball and to spend New Year's day with the Pattersons.

With the pheasant season over and the duck season on the wane, the Onwentsia hunters are now turning their attention to the traps, and the club has just completed the construction of a new skeet field. The popularity of this new form of trap shooting, which closely approximates field shooting, has swept the country and the Onwentsia has been quick to add this equipment to its regular traps.

The old caddy house between the ninth and tenth fairways has been converted into an attractive shooting house, brightened with new paint, furniture, and even curtains. Hot coffee will be served on cold days and many competitions for both men and women are planned throughout the season. The opening event will be a Thanksgiving morning turkey shoot. Seventy-five targets will be shot and the largest turkey will go to the shooter with the high total out of 25 targets at skeet, 25 at straight traps and 25 at the double traps.

Lake Foresters have been shooting "skeet" for the last two years at the Knollwood club at the Philip D. Armours', and there already are many enthusiasts. The Chicago Golf club has a "skeet" and inter-club shoots soon will be as popular as inter-club golf matches, probably.

Hunters' Trials Are Delayed.

The hunters' trials scheduled for last Saturday afternoon at the Onwentsia grounds at Milburn had to be postponed because the ground was frozen. No new date was set, but the Onwentsia riders still hope to hold

A Job a Day

Every little improvement we make in our home right now helps us—and the other fellow, too.

How about your night light conveniences? Switches at the bedside make it possible to illuminate an entire room at any moment. Or, better still, to avoid the shock of too sudden brightness, install a light beneath the bed which will flood the room with very mild illumination. Night lights with soft blue globes are a help in hall or bathroom or nursery and they can be left burning all night for very little cost. An electrician can quote costs, and installation eliminates painful groping, stumbling, or even falling, perhaps, in the wee sma' night hours.

BARTER AND SAIL

By HENRY C. ROWLAND

INSTALLMENT 1.

YOUTH AND COURAGE.

Under a roadside apple tree Roberta Millbank waited for the school bus to come along. She was no longer a schoolgirl and she had never in her life ridden on a school or any other sort of bus, but the idea that she might be refused as a passenger did not occur to her.

Instead of the bus, Peter Cavan came along in a small and very much used car. At sight of Roberta perched on her up-ended suitcase Peter frowned, with a look of understanding in his eyes. The small car stopped with a shudder as if shocked at finding Roberta there at that early hour of a late September day, and alone. Actually, the brakes needed to be relined.

"Good morning, Miss Bobbs," Peter said. "Better ride into town with me. The old bus is always crammed with kids."

"Thanks, Peter. That may save a row if somebody should try to stop me."

He got down and stowed her big suitcase in the rumble. Roberta noticed that it was filled with hand luggage. "So you're leaving town, too," she said.

"Nothing more to keep me," he said briefly. "But you've got your Uncle John and Aunt Amelia up there."

"That's the trouble, Peter. But I have also got my health, and being free, white and twenty-one there's not much they can do about this even if they should want to, which they won't."

Peter drove on, thinking hard. They crossed the rapid little river on an iron bridge and saw half a mile downstream the massive structures of brick and stone in which no wheel turned, but loomed grim and silent like an evacuated fortress. Roberta looked farther and higher to a hill plateau that dominated the mill town, where the tower and mansard of a stately building revealed sectors of itself between the huge and venerable elms and oaks and maples.

She turned quickly away, winking the dimness from her eyes. "Where are you bound, Peter?"

"Boston, Miss Bobbs."

"Got something there?"

"Not yet. What about yourself? Going to visit friends?"

"You really ought to know more about me than that, Peter Cavan."

"That's what bothers me."

"What you know, or what you don't?"

"Both, Miss Bobbs. I can't imagine a girl whose life and circumstances and general training have done less to fit her for fighting the hungry world than yours have."

"You don't flatter my assets, Peter."

"I'm appraising them from the best I know about their legitimate commercial value. You've got youth and courage and strength and beauty."

"That's a little better, even if the last is politely untrue. A sort of impudent prettiness, I've been told, but beauty, no."

He ignored the interruption. "The jobs filled by young girls are rapidly getting less and less and the applicants for them more and more. A growing number of girls are having to look for work. Lot of them can offer youth and courage and health and strength and physical attractions plus technical training and ability."

"O, dear, you make me wish I'd waited for the school bus. Are you trying to make me feel licked before I start?"

"You ought not to start this way, Miss Bobbs. That is, unless you've got something definite in mind."

"All I had in mind this morning when I started was to get away from a gloomy pair of poor sport relations before they managed to make that miserable thing of myself. Even worse, a dependent one."

"Now that you've done that, what have you in mind, Miss Bobbs?"

"My old school. If opens soon and they ought to give me a job if they have to make one to order. You know father built them a gymnasium and endowed it."

Peter knew all about that. He knew also that if the fashionable and costly school had not been led to expect this benefaction Roberta probably would never have graduated. He asked: "What sort of a job?"

"Assistant athletic instructress, or something of the sort," she said carelessly. "I'm an A-1 all round athlete, if I says it as shouldn't, and may not look it until I train down a bit. High diving and swimming are my long suits."

Peter remembered Roberta's athletic triumphs. The situation looked to him a little better. But he was skeptical, even cynical, about gratitude for past favors, especially where such favors were something in the nature of a trade and no more to be expected. Moreover, while the daughter of his late employer and himself had never been on terms of social intimacy Peter knew a good deal about her by hearsay. She was reported to be intolerant of discipline.

One had only to glance at her pretty but challenging features to see that defiance lurked in and under them. Their provocative allure invited criticism or reproof. Their expression as an ensemble was neither mischievous nor petulant nor haughty, but held a sort of robust schoolboy disdain for any sort of authority that was not based on a strong and admirable consistency and strength.

Properly handled and directed Roberta would prove docile enough, Peter thought, and the fleeting idea passed through his mind that she was the sort of young woman who needed a man's captaincy to get the best from her. If he were the right sort of a man. But he doubted she would last long as any sort of teacher in a girls' school. She had never learned discipline on her way through.

"Have you applied for a position there, Miss Bobbs?" He asked.

"No, they'd have fended me off on some count or other. It's going to take some doing. I'm not keen about it, Peter. But it's the only thing that I could think of."

"Look here, Miss Bobbs, what if I take you there and have a little talk with the principal. . . ."

"That might help, but I don't want to hang myself on you like that. And why not cut out the 'Miss,' now that we're in the same hot tin boat all adrift on the sea of circumstance?"

"The boat sure is getting hot," he admitted, "and the day is going to be still hotter in an hour or two. I've always thought of you as 'Miss Bobbs' like all the rest of us who've been born in the mills operatives' cottages and managed to work up. You've always called me Peter since your father took me into the bank. I don't quite like the idea of changing all that just yet."

"As you like," she said, indifferently. "Everything's been changed, though."

It grew hotter and hotter. The radiator began to leak. Peter bought some cement to repair it if the leak increased. A front tire went flat, and having no spare wheel he changed the tube. At noon they stopped long enough for coffee and hot dogs. Roberta took it all in sportsmanly spirit, but at about four o'clock she said:

"There's a pretty lake off the road ahead. Let's run down to the shore and you can mend the radiator and I'll cool off, too."

Presently they saw the lake in the distance, then found a lane that turned in through what looked like an old abandoned farm and led down through a stretch of pasture to the water's edge. There was no sign of anybody anywhere about. Peter stopped the car in the shade of some spruces. Roberta stepped out, walked into a thick clump of young white pine that fringed the shore.

There was a splash, then Roberta's blithe voice again: "Divine. No wonder the Bible says that cleanliness is next to Godliness, and it's a lot easier to gain with the help of a lake like this."

Peter sang out to her: "You've got the right idea, Miss Bobbs. All we can manage to keep now, is clean. . . ."

'Should Mothers Smoke?' Brings Readers' Reply

One Woman Contends It's Odd Not To.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Here is the first letter I chose from among those which discussed the question, "Should a mother smoke?" The question, you may remember, was asked of me by a young mother.

The following is an interesting point of view:

"The letter in regard to smoking before children interested me very much, and I would like to give my point of view.

"Smoking, in women, is one of the most recent of the conventions which are undergoing change. In these days, while it is in the transitory period, it is natural that there should be a good deal of controversy on that subject. There was probably the same exchange of views when short skirts as opposed to ankle length ones were coming into fashion.

"Without doubt there were 'old fashioned' people who declared a child's morals would be influenced for the worst if he should see his mother's ankles brazenly exposed at all times.

"If his mother should smoke herself into a state of coma, or regularly make herself violently sick, then I should say the psychological effect on the child might be definitely bad. It is natural that a small child should be puzzled and interested in seeing his mother smoke for the first time, especially if she assumes, as is probably the case of the young woman who wrote to you, a hangdog expression and a guilty, furtive look. It is natural that he should be intrigued, and ask questions. There would be something wrong with his mentality if he didn't.

"Children of 3 have not the judgment with which some parents are apt to credit them. A child is learning what is right or wrong at that age, and what mother does is right. He has no prejudices until they are implanted in him.

"If there is any harm in moderate smoking, which I doubt, how can it be moral harm? Little children are essentially logical when they are intelligent.

"Daddy smokes, and daddy is good. Mummy is good—would she be naughty if she smoked? After all, she's grown up. They would not formulate their thoughts in that way, of course, but the impression would be the same.

"The only sentiment they would feel would be that of interest, if mother suddenly began to smoke after three years of abstinence.

"In England [my home] ten years ago one would be horrified to see a woman smoking. My grandfather told me that only 'common' women smoked. Nowadays everybody smokes and the nonsmoking woman is the exception rather than the rule. If we hear of a woman who does not, our reaction is that there is 'probably something wrong with the poor thing's tummy.'

"Thank you for your attention.

"D. M. W."

Tomorrow's letter will present the other side of the controversy.

Claudia Muzio Charms Again at Her Recital

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Claudia Muzio is quite as much of an artist in a recital of songs as she is in opera. This has been said before, but her program at Orchestra hall yesterday afternoon gives the best kind of an excuse for repeating the observation.

She is an artist in the selection of her songs and an artist in their performance. Some of the most attractive and least hackneyed works of the season came up for her treatment, particularly in the Italian and French groups with which she began. It is true that she grew reminiscent over her career at the Auditorium and Civic Opera house by bringing back two of the best known arias in all opera, "Tacea la notte," from "Il Trovatore," and the "Ballatella," from "Pagliacci," and she was right to do so, because the best of the artists have more or less of a duty to keep past glories in the memory of hearers.

Just the same, one remembers with fondness the newer songs, how she was dramatic or lyric, grave or gay, interpreting the moods of the different works just as their composers might have wished to hear them. In their interpretation she had expert assistance from Charles Lurvey at the piano.

That eager and ambitious chamber music organization, the Chicago String quartet, began a new series of recitals at the Chicago Woman's club theater yesterday afternoon. One of the interesting features of their seasons is an unending search for seldom played music, wherefore they began their performance with a Quartet in A by Ildebrando Pizzetti of the modern Italians, and continued with the song cycle, "On Wenlock Edge," by Ralph Vaughan Williams, modern English, a setting of the poems by A. E. Housman.

The cycle is written for tenor voice with accompaniment of piano and four strings. Gilbert Ford appeared as the singer, and Rose Lyon Du Moulin joined the players as pianist. It is possible that these songs will not be considered Williams' highest musical output, but there is one item, "O, When I Was in Love With You," that takes a preferred rating. Other assignments made it impossible to hear more than the end of the Pizzetti number, which was agreeable, if not exciting.

Mae Globerman, a young pianist, gave a recital at Kimball hall yesterday afternoon whose most important part was a sonata by Beethoven and a group by Chopin. She has developed considerable facility of technic, and was able on this foundation to impose many of the best ideas of her instructors. Her brilliant performance made her greatly popular with her audience.

Chap Torments with Suspicion, Yet Girl Adores

Doris Urges Her to Show Some Pride.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I have been going with my boy friend steadily for four years. About two years ago I did a few things which made him doubt and mistrust me. I confessed to these. He has never forgotten and since has been accusing me of things I never did at that time or at any other. I can't make him believe I am telling the truth.

"Last week he broke off with me because I would not confess to something I never did. And I am heartbroken, because he meant more to me than anything or anybody else in this world, and he knows it. I want him back and I haven't anything to confess and he won't come back until I do. What shall I do? DIXIE."

You should offer incense to the gods that you're rid of the sadistic young man and pray that he'll never come back into your life. That's what you should do.

But if you're in love with the tormentor, it's what you won't do, at all. You'll exert every effort to lure him back to your side so you'll have to take more punishment. For which you're not going to be any more censored than any of the rest of us humans whose heads cannot operate sanely because of the noise the heart is making.

However, if you ever want to get peace for either head or heart, now is the time for a little training to be extended to the man in the case. Weaken quickly now and you'll have a repetition of the accusations and denials until you are even sorer of heart. Hold out, "Dixie," if it is humanly possible for you to do until the man makes a move toward a reconciliation. It's your only chance of escape from future misery.

When he does come around, draw up a sharp, clear cut bargain that your word is to be taken or there'll be no reconciliation. If your future depends on this man for happiness you'd better have everything settled before you take up with him again. You won't lose him—holding out on him. That's the way you tame a bullying male, and the only way known.

There's a shade of insanity in the type of persecutor you've hitched your wagon to, "Dixie." The insanity that is born of jealousy. So you'd better appoint yourself the physician and administer to him the only cure possible, the threat of losing you forever if he repeats his suspicion.

Skirt Fullness Goes to Front of New Ensemble

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Skirt fullness is the newest recruit to go to the front in the Paris fashion battle. Skirts this winter are almost as varied as the temperamental waistline. Some of the couturiers are making them return to the straight and narrow path, while others are more lenient, giving them a slight flare or fullness. Mme. Maggy Rouff does the last mentioned, but in an entirely new way. She concentrates all the fullness in the center front of the section of coats and dresses.

If you will look at the sketch shown today you will see how she does this in an afternoon ensemble. The frock is in grege colored heavy Canton crêpe, and its full sleeves, cut in one with the bodice, flare from elbow to wrist. Both bodice and sleeves are trimmed with drawnwork. Rising up from the bodice, a tab is drawn down over the point of the neckline in front, draping it cowl fashion. A self-material belt, that ends in two tabs, fastens on a single button at the center of the waistline. The center front fullness in the skirt section is obtained by two bias cut bands which start at either side of the hips, at the waistline, making a flaring gore.

At the right of the sketch is shown the coat that is worn over this frock. It is in a brown broadcloth, has a side front closing, and two box plaits at the center front of the skirt section. Its full sleeves, caught tight at the wrists, are made in one with the bodice. A shawl collar and a belt of brown astrakhan fur give this coat a Russian air.

Chinese Dishes Will Appeal to Hungry Family

Provide Tasty Service of Meat Left-Overs.

BY MARY MEADE.

"Sunday, roast beef; Monday, ha-a-sh; Tuesday——"

That's the way hundreds of thousands of American homes, with monotonous regularity, have been starting the week for generations, Monday's hash coming as the inevitable consequence of Sunday's roast. Not that hash can't be a most amazingly delicious affair at times, but it is so seldom at its best.

However that may be, if we will just set our minds to it there are ways—plenty of them—for injecting life and hope into those Monday meat left-overs. One of the neatest and newest of these is to conjure up a Chinese specialty designed to embrace and glorify even the saddest bits of left-overs in the meat line. Chow mein or chop suey will do the trick with true oriental zest and mystery.

Only don't start worrying over that botheration of collecting all the Chinese vegetables and spending hours chopping, shredding, and generally cutting up your fingers. For nowadays we find them on the market all gathered chummily in a single can. Soy bean sprouts, water chestnuts, bamboo shoots, sweet peppers, and mushrooms—they may all be bought en masse, blended according to ancient Chinese recipes and put up in immaculate American plants. And the results? "Yum yum!" seems to be the appropriate reply.

CHOP SUEY MODERN STYLE.

3 tablespoons fat
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup water
½ cup shredded onions [if desired]
1 cup diced, cooked pork, veal, fowl, or sea food
1½ cups chopped celery
½ cup canned, drained bean sprouts
3 level tablespoons corn starch
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon brown seasoning sauce
2 tablespoons soy sauce

Heat the fat in a covered saucepan or skillet over a brisk fire. Add the salt, meat, and onions, stirring constantly for two minutes. Now add the celery and water, cover and boil until the celery is done, about four minutes. Combine the starch, pepper, and sauces in a bowl. Add the sprouts to the ingredients of the skillet and heat thoroughly. Take two tablespoons of the liquid from the cooking mixture and stir into the thickening until it is smooth. Add to the chop suey, stirring constantly to prevent burning. Remove from the fire and serve piping hot.

Rice is the best accompaniment for chop suey. Cook yours Chinese fashion by letting it boil until just tender, then running cold water over it quickly and reheating it in the oven. It should be fluffy and dry. Or to create a chow mein out of the chop suey merely serve the mixture over fried noodles. These may be prepared at home or bought from the grocer in cans.

Then are you acquainted with egg foo yong—a Chinese dish par excellence? The following recipe makes more use of canned beaned sprouts found in almost any store you visit:

EGGS FOO YONG.
[ONE DOZEN.]

10 eggs
1 cup shredded onion
1 cup bean sprouts
1 cup finely cut roasted or boiled cold meat or fish

Drain all the juice off the sprouts. Mix thoroughly with the meat and onions. Beat the eggs slightly and add to the mixture. Use a soup ladle of three-fourths cup capacity, and pour one dipper at a time into a frying pan containing one-half inch of very hot fat. When one side is browned turn over and brown the other. Remove and continue frying, keeping the cakes hot. A most delectable sauce for this may be made by thickening good soup stock with flour or corn starch and seasoning with brown or soy sauce.

Constance Bennett Ranks as Best Dressed Screen 'Celeb'

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Some one once said that nothing breeds like superlatives in American ink pots. The building up of movie personalities creates a lively market for them. I know no group about whom there is heard such a splutter of superlatives. Sometimes they're warranted, sometimes not—when you meet the celluloid beauty in the flesh.

But if there is an ace of aces among the cinema queens' best dressed, I'd just as soon award the platinum encrusted diploma to Constance Bennett as to any screen person I've ever seen. And there's a lesson for young women in Connie's daytime dressing. I speak of daytime dressing because it covers a wider field of imitation than Connie's evening appearance, let's say. By right of being her high salaried self, Miss Bennett might justifiably dim the glory of a roomful of beautifully dressed women with that gorgeous evening wrap of hers embellished with the enormous collar of silver fox. Miss Connie knows her stuff as the best dressed woman, daytime or evening.

But the extreme chic of the afternoon dress in which I saw her recently reminded me of the truth of the Frenchwoman's axiom that "one is chic in proportion not to what one puts on, but to what one leaves off." And here was elimination practised to the exclusion of frill and furbelow, bracelet, pin and necklace: A simple battleship gray frock, tunicked and belted, with turnover collar of the dress material. And who says a blonde can't wear this color hasn't seen the Bennett blonde in it.

I don't know how the announcement that Connie Bennett is letting her hair go back to its natural shade will affect the heads of her fans. I wouldn't be afraid to predict that there will follow a back to nature movement in many a honey, straw, platinum and hennaed camp. The coiffure influence of these cinema stars is beyond calculation.

Miss Bennett reports, too, that she is saying farewell to short bobbed hair. She has, however, accomplished a three-in-one length by which she may appear bobbed, longish bobbed or wear her hair low on the neck, according to mood, occupation, or dress. The tendril bang is a charming Bennett touch, the smooth, unwaved hair on the top of the head adding the expected "sophisticated note." The girl "who is a knockout"—as direct, vital, bunkless, clever as you'll meet in a lifetime of interviewing.

Happy Wife Keeps Youth; Brushes Away Gray Hair

Now you can really look years younger. Simply brush away those unsightly streaks or patches of gray. It is so easy to do—and at home—with Brownatone. Over 20 years of success recommend this proved method. With an ordinary small brush you just tint your hair back to its natural shade—whether blonde, brown or black. Guaranteed harmless. Active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Does not coat the surface. Actually penetrates the hair. Defies detection. No telltale flat "dyed" look. Cannot affect waving of hair.

No need to guess. First cut a lock of hair from your head and apply a little of this famous tint. If Brownatone does not give your gray, streaked, dull, or faded hair its natural color, youth, and sheen, your money back. Only 50c.

INSTALLMENT LXI.

LOVE'S SURRENDER.

Nell was reluctantly obliged to admit logic in what Natasha said. It seemed quite likely that Michael's movements on the night of the crime would never be revealed.

"Still, you might have taken my hundred pounds. Why didn't you?"

She faltered under his direct gaze. "It's hard to explain the feeling I've always had about accepting money from men. I shrank terribly from applying to Serge Wassilieff. The thought of it was absolute torture. I've a sort of complex on the subject, I think, ever since some rather horrid experiences I had during the Paris days. You know what this Braselton woman said about the two positions I lost?"

"I'd hoped you'd tell me about that."

"I will. You see, I began earning my living at seventeen. I was employed in several French families as chaufeuse, and every time, without exception, the husbands, or the sons, tried to make love to me. I stuck it as long as I could, simply because jobs were hard to come by and my mother's hats didn't pay; but when I continued to hold out against these men's advances, an excuse was found to get rid of me. What could I do? If I'd made a row, the charges would have been denied, and the women would have been furious. So I held my tongue."

"The unspeakable beasts!"

"They were—beasts. One old general, with a Legion d'Honneur, used to lie in wait for me in dark corners. He—O, I can't talk about it!" With a shaky laugh she pressed her fingers over her eyes. "I don't like posing as a persecuted maiden. Plenty of girls go through the same thing. My mother knew, though, and it made her very unhappy. That's why she was so anxious for me to come here."

Nell was at last beginning to see clearly, but with the wave of sympathy which swept over him came an uncomfortable suspicion.

"Natasha——" He stroked her smooth throat with a timid hand. "Is that why you told me I only wanted to make love to you? Did you think I was like those other brutes?"

"Not quite. You couldn't be," she returned with embarrassment. "But—well, I'd come to believe all men were pretty much the same. Either I'd had bad luck, or else there was something about me which invited the wrong sort of attentions. I'd begun to fear it was my fault. O, it's no credit to me if I didn't give in. I can't bear feeling cheap, that's all . . . I think I've a sixth sense about certain matters. I was not mistaken over the Tilburys, was I? And I rather believe I was right about you, too. I sized you up as the sort of man to whom conquests have come easy, who expected women to fall into his arms, and who had no desire to give up his independence. After all, why should you? Quite candidly, now, you didn't really want to marry me or any one else. Did you?"

He reddened under the question.

"Not at first, even though you drew me as no woman ever had done, and seemed to me the perfect companion I'd always been looking for. At the same time, you must see how this idea of your having a lover held me in check. No man wants to risk a certain rebuff." He paused, to add in an altered tone: "I love you now, Natasha, every inch of you, in ways I didn't think possible. The kind of independence you speak of means nothing to me."

"When did it begin?" she asked, studying him with detachment.

"When I kissed you, of course—but something even more vital happened when I held that little green slipper of yours in my hand that night at the inn. Queer, isn't it? After you were arrested and in danger, I tumbled headlong. There's been no hope for me since."

"In spite of half believing me guilty?"

"In spite of everything. Never mind me, though. It's your feelings I want to discuss. I haven't bothered you for obvious reasons, but now—well, the long and short of it is, what are you going to do about me?"

Those narrowed eyes of hers had never been more baffling than at this instant. It was without the least change of expression that she answered him slowly: "You've saved my life twice. Doesn't that establish a sort of right over me?"

"No!" he cried with energy. "And let me tell you this: If you have any notion of marrying me for any reason other than because you'd hate living without me, I'll walk out of that door now and never come in it again."

Her gaze strayed lingeringly over his bronzed skin, the parting of his hair, the anxious lines which had formed round the mouth and eyes.

"Has it ever occurred to you," she said, "why, instead of letting Saunders send for the car I came all the way back to Somerset?"

"I supposed it was on your brother's account."

"No, he would have been as well off in London for the few days that were left us. I came because I had to see you again. Knowing how it would hurt, never dreaming I meant anything real to you, still I came. I couldn't help it."

Incredulous rapture surged through him. He slid his hands under her pliant body and caught her to him in a close embrace.

"Darling! It's a gorgeous, beautiful lie. Tell me more."

"Then listen: That evening we danced together—you remember?—up to that moment I'd been a little afraid, without knowing why. Well, when I felt your arms around me and your chin touching my hair, I realized the truth. It wasn't you I was afraid of. For the first time, it was myself."

Their lips were together. Outside a breeze stirred the white syringa, sending up a waft of fragrance. Rooks cawed, and throughout the whole landscape there was a drowsy hum; but in the room itself, for long moments, there was neither movement nor sound.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Chicago's Bears, after a scoreless first quarter which was the only period in which Benny Friedman played, crashed through Brooklyn's defenses yesterday afternoon at Wrigley field to win their third game of the year, 20 to 0. Six thousand five hundred, a rather disappointing attendance in view of Friedman's customary drawing power, saw the contest.

Perhaps Friedman's presence helped check the Bears in that first quarter. But had he continued at his back field position the score probably would have been as large. The Bears needed no incentive, but just as the second half got under way, with Chicago leading 7 to 0, it was announced that the professional champions from Green Bay had lost their first game of the year, to the New York Giants. Since Green Bay meets the Bears here in the final game of the season Dec. 11, the Bears now have visions of winning their first league title.

Air Attack Nearly Clicks.

Brooklyn was kept on the defense all during the second half. But in the second period Brooklyn appeared to better advantage, particularly in its air attack. With Ray Novotny throwing, Brooklyn carried the ball within the Bears' 10 yard line. But the Dodgers were pressed for time, since only a few seconds remained, and a forward pass was incomplete in the end zone to cut short the threat of a tie at half time.

John Doehring, a newcomer on the Bears' squad who can throw a football farther than any back who ever has played on the north side, hurled one of his best to send Bill Hewitt to Brooklyn's 17 yard line early in the second period. Hewitt made a running, leaping catch for a gain of 45 yards. However, the Bears could not muster the drive necessary to cover the remaining distance to the goal. Brooklyn taking the ball on its 11 yard line.

Molesworth brought back Grossman's kick to the 26 yard line. Interference on a pass to Grange advanced to Brooklyn's 11 yard line. Nagurski plunged for a yard. Then, after a fake drive into the line, Molesworth tossed laterally to Grange and Red circled his right end for the touchdown. Tiny Engebretsen added the extra point by placement.

Passes Worry Bears.

After the next kickoff, Carl Brumbaugh replaced Molesworth and George Corbett took over Grange's left half back position. But these boys didn't have an opportunity to try their offensive tactics, for Novotny's passes soon had the Bears in their own end of the gridiron. Novotny had been substituted for Friedman.

This march covered 72 yards and involved four first downs, all by passes. The final throw to Grossman landed the ball on the Bears' four yard line, but another pass failed and the Bears took the ball as the result of the touchback.

The Bears' second touchdown came in the third quarter as climax to a drive of 59 yards. The principal ingredient was a pass from Molesworth to Johnson for 33 yards on a kick formation. With the ball on Brooklyn's seven yard line, Franklin went through center for two yards. Corbett could not gain. On the next play Molesworth's lateral to Hewitt bounced off the referee's arm, but Molesworth scooped up the ball and went around the Dodgers' right end for the touchdown. Engebretsen's kick was wide.

Try for Field Goal Fails.

Loss of 15 yards for holding checked the Bears early in the fourth period when they seemed headed for the goal with Dick Sisk making one run of 31 yards on a quick thrust inside of guard. On fourth down Tuckwell tried a place kick standing on Brooklyn's 30 yard line but missed.

Grossman lost three yards and then kicked out of bounds on his 27 yard line from which point the Bears started their last successful march. Bronko Nagurski smashed through center for 18 yards. Three drives at tackle by Dick Nesbitt reached the goal. Johnson place kicked the point.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 20.—This was Tim Mara day at the Polo grounds and the New York Giants came through for the grand old man of the box office with a 6 to 0 victory over the Green Bay Packers, said be the greatest football team in the country, who had not been defeated in nine previous games this year.

There were two bands in the ball yard, a double portion of band, to sentimentalize with appropriate songs, including "Three Cheers for Harvard," "To Hell with Yale," "Far Above Cayuga's Waters," and "The Sidewalks of New York," which seems to be the alma mater song of the Giants. One band came from Manhattan college, a Catholic school which has been taking up football in a serious way under Chick Meehan and wondering how long this sort of thing has been going on.

Other Band Just Sits.

The other band represented a Jewish orphanage and was strictly sedentary, whereas the Manhattan band marched about the field during the intermission behind a drum major in a fuzzy white shako as big as an ash can. The Manhattan band seems to be advanced far beyond the Manhattan football team, being pretentious enough right now for a good Western conference team, and there is some doubt as to whether they jeopardize their amateur standing as a college football band by horning and evolving for a professional football magnate.

However that may be, both football teams and the band covered themselves with credit and not a little honest slime from a churned up baseball lot, and the patrons, about 30,000 in number, including the honoraries of pass customers, evinced great satisfaction. The goal posts were not dismantled at the conclusion, however, and this failure pointed out an oversight on the part of the management. They have hired cheer leaders from time to time, and today a poet laureate bobbed up in the literature of the official program [price 15 cents] with a new alma mater song dedicated to Tim Mara, entitled "My Song," but nobody had thought to hire any snake dancers to celebrate the victory nor any housewreckers to tear down the goal posts.

Probably Written on Space.

Therefore the occasion closed with a somewhat sodden smack as the game ended and the patrons, emitting a few disconnected yips, began hoofing it for the exits.

The new alma mater song, struck from the lyre of Poet Thomas J. McCarthy, runs about a hundred lines, which is somewhat longer than the formula for such works, but then it probably was written on space, and it was demonstrated years ago in the newspaper business that the space system made for length.

A few lines will serve to tell you about the new song:

Each fall my joy is without bounds,
On Sundays at the Polo grounds,
For when our football Giants play,
Just try to keep this guy away.
It is a little better song than most

Gardiner, 12, 6, 9—30.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The fighting Blackhawks, apparently acclimated in the cozy little Coliseum, last night won their second successive start against classy competition, when they took the fast skating Les Canadiens into camp, 2 to 1.

All the goals were scored in the first seven minutes of the second period, but the fine team play of each aggregation kept the 5,000 customers on the alert and apparently thoroughly entertained.

The Hawks made two scores 28 seconds before the visitors accomplished their one. From that time on it was a nip and tuck affair, the Hawks acting diligently to add another point for safety and at the same time taking no chances on letting the Frenchmen tie the score.

First Period Scoreless.

The Hawks will make their next appearance on home ice two weeks hence, when they will have their first local meeting with the New York Rangers, on Sunday night, Dec. 4. Their next game will be played Tuesday night against the Bruins in Boston.

The purpose of the first period seemed to be to give the goalies, especially Hainsworth, a chance to show their complete repertoires in the manner of stops. The visiting net tender accomplished 16 saves, his technique including everything from a light swish with the stick to baseball catches with his mittens. Gardiner made 12 stops, but his were mostly quick kicks.

Such able gents as Joliat and Morenz were the most persistent in their scoring attempts. Practically every forward and defense man on the Hawks took a whang at Hainsworth, but closeups by Jenkins and Ripley, both of which Hainsworth captured in his left mitten, were the closest to going into the score column.

Both Teams Score.

Whereas there were no scores in the first period, there were three in the first seven minutes of the second session—two by the Hawks in a span of less than two and a half minutes and the third by the enemy 28 seconds later.

The first counter was made in 4:05. Jenkins took the puck near the Hawk goal and was escorted down the ice by his fellow forwards, Cook and McFadyen. The scoring possibilities of the maneuver seemed remote, for the entire visiting team got in position to break up the march. But the puck started bouncing around, as pucks will. Eventually it reached Cook, stationed to Hainsworth's right, about 15 feet in front of the cage. The visiting goalie couldn't switch his dance step in time to thwart Tommy and the rubber sailed in without the slightest hindrance.

In 6:32 Ripley sought to make one of those long shots from mid-ice. The effort hit Leduc, who was standing several feet inside the blue line. Leduc lost track of the disc and while he was seeking to focus on the thing Vic skated up and shot a goal right past the surprised Mr. Hainsworth.

Hawks Continue Attack.

It is possible the Hawks were feeling a little to proud at having scored two goals on Les Canadiens in such rapid succession. Anyhow, Joliat got the puck immediately after the face-off, passed it to Gagnon, who skated to the brink of the cage, where he dropped the puck for the alert Morenz, who was right there to ram it home.

You might think that the Hawks played a defensive game in the third period in as much as they entered the final session in front. On the contrary, however, they followed the ancient sports axiom that a good offense is the best defense.

As a consequence Hainsworth was given his toughest span of the whole evening, especially under the fire of the Gottselig-Thompson-Couture line at the 15 minute mark and it was just as lively when Cook, McFadyen, and Jenkins followed that trio.

Les Canadiens put in all forwards in the last two minutes.

MAYBE THE DODGERS NEEDED HACK WILSON

Holmer's Poor Punts Help Stapleton Beat Cards, 21-7

New York, Nov. 20.—[Special.]—Two touchdowns in the first quarter and another in the last gave Stapleton a 21 to 7 victory over the Chicago Cardinals today. A partisan crowd of approximately 5,000 viewed the game and several times seemed on the verge of breaking it up.

This tension endured throughout the play and in the last quarter Hinton kicked Malloy of the Cardinals and was ordered from the game. The game was halted for several minutes as the guards hastened to clear the field of belligerent rooters.

Poor Kicks Hurt.

Stapleton got away to a two touchdown lead in the first quarter as a result of two poor kicks by Walt Holmer, Chicago half back. Ken Strong took advantage of the first one which sailed to the Cardinals' 40 yard line and advanced steadily, finally taking the ball over. He kicked the extra point from placement.

A 26 yard pass from Pape to Roy Campiglio after Holmer's kick to his own 25 yard line, scored the second touchdown. This time Wilson tallied the extra point. Campiglio scored once more in the last period after a steady march which commenced at midfield. Wilson kicked the extra point.

The Cardinals managed to get a touchdown after several frustrated attempts when Holmer, standing on Stapleton's 37 yard line, hurled a pass for 35 yards to Chuck Kassell, who ran over the line.

BOSTON LOSES, 10 TO 0.

Portsmouth, O., Nov. 20.—(AP)—The Portsmouth Spartans tightened their hold on second place in the National Professional Football league today by defeating the Boston Braves, 10 to 0.

A 37 yard drive aided by a 15 yard Boston penalty for holding gave the Spartans a touchdown in the second period. John Cavosie bucked the ball over from the four yard line. Dutch Clark kicked the extra point. Clark also dropkicked a field goal from the 20 yard line in the third period.

55,000 See Soccer Game; 3 Shot as 200,000 Riot

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 20.—(AP)—Riverplate won the Argentine professional soccer football championship today, defeating Independence, 3 to 0. A crowd of 55,000 watched the struggle, while another 200,000 milled around outside the field. Police twice were forced to fire over the heads of those outside to keep order, but wounded three persons. Stones and bottles were thrown freely.

FIELD GOALS ARE REVIVED TO WIN BIG GRID GAMES

The goal from the field, which largely has been neglected by the majority of teams since the goal posts were moved back to the end line, acquired new importance Saturday. By Harry Newman's placement Michigan won first place in the Western conference, defeating Minnesota, 3 to 0. And Nebraska, victor in the Big Six, broke a scoreless tie with the second place Oklahoma eleven by scoring a goal from the field. The final result, however, was 5 to 0, a safety being added in the last period.

Michigan's championship marks the third successive year the Wolverines have finished at the top of the standings, but it is the first that honor was not shared with others. In 1930 Michigan and Northwestern went through undefeated. A year ago Northwestern ended the regular schedule in first place. Purdue, however, won from the Wildcats in the post-season contests for charity and thus tied for the leadership and pulled Michigan in also.

Tie Fails Purdue.

That Purdue doesn't have equal rating with Michigan is due to Northwestern's 7 to 7 tie with the Boilermakers, which was probably the high point of Northwestern's season and afforded ample satisfaction for the 1931 defeat. Michigan and Purdue, of course, did not meet. It is useless to compare these teams by their showing against the same opponents. Michigan defeated Northwestern, but Purdue outscored Michigan against Chicago, Indiana and Minnesota.

In the final set of games in the conference, Ohio State also found a field goal to be all important. The Buckeyes defeated Illinois, 3 to 0. Despite this defeat, which was its fourth, the Illini finished seventh in the conference where a year ago they were last. Illinois defeated Chicago and Indiana and played brilliantly against Wisconsin, although defeated.

Wisconsin concluded its most successful campaign in recent seasons by whipping Chicago, 18 to 7. The Badg-

Plan 2 Charity Games Between Prep Champions

The championship teams of four Chicagoland high school leagues may meet in charity games within the next two weeks, it was learned last night. The contests would involve Morgan Park, Chicago Public High School league champion, and Mount Carmel, Catholic league, and Evanston, Suburban league, and York, West Suburban league.

This afternoon Brother Sylvester, president of the Catholic league, and Mount Carmel officials will meet in the offices of A. H. Pritzlaff, secretary of the city league, to discuss plans for a city championship game. Mount Carmel, which last year lost to Harrison Tech for the city title, won its second successive Catholic league crown yesterday, while Morgan Park clinched the public schools championship Saturday.

A conference to arrange a York-Evanston game is scheduled today in the office of George Letts, principal of York High school at Elmhurst. Evanston scored five consecutive victories in winning the Suburban league title, while York ended its West Suburban league schedule with four triumphs and two ties.

NATIONAL ICE RACES JAN. 28 AT OCONOMOWOC

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Oconomowoc, Wis., Nov. 20.—The 1933 edition of the men's national outdoor ice skating championships will be held on Lake Fowler here Jan. 28 and 29. This was decided today at a conference of Wisconsin skating officials and Frank Kalteux of Chicago, president of the Amateur Skating Union of the United States.

Titles will be determined in the following events: 220 yards, 440 yards, 880 yards, three-quarter mile, one, two, and five miles.

Attempts will be made to hold the women's senior championships, as well as an invitational intermediate and an open meet for juniors, at the same time. The meet late in January will mark the third successive winter this city has held the national championship meet.

MOUNT CARMEL WHIPS ST. MEL, 13-0; WINS TITLE

O'Malley Scores Twice in Catholic Prep Final.

Capt. Vincent O'Malley, the only back field member of the 1931 Mount Carmel championship team who returned this season, led the squad to the 1932 Catholic High School league title on the muddy White City field yesterday. Capt. O'Malley scored all the points in the defeat of St. Mel, west section champion, 13 to 0. A crowd of 10,000 taxed the capacity of the grounds.

O'Malley scored his first touchdown on a short plunge late in the second quarter. He went over the St. Mel goal line again in the third quarter and finally left the game in the final minutes when Mount Carmel turned loose all its bench warmers, including Gordie Tyrell, a senior end, who played the only minute in his prep career.

Celebrate Before It Ends.

St. Mel did not accomplish a first down nor did it complete a pass. It was reported late in the last quarter that St. Mel had clicked with a 12 yard pass, but no one in the crowd noticed it, for along with thes crubs who were battling St. Mel were many Mount Carmel students who already had uprooted the goal posts and were marching done the field.

A poor St. Mel punt gave Mount Carmel its first opportunity to score. The second quarter opened with St. Mel having the ball on its own 12 yard line. Eddie McCarthy, St. Mel left half back, failed to gain at the strong Mount Carmel line. McCarthy then punted, Mickey Change, Mount Carmel sophomore full back, receiving the weak kick on St. Mel's 20 yard line.

Mount Carmel then received the first of several penalties and the ball was taken back to St. Mel's 35 yard line. Then Mount Carmel started an aerial attack. Capt. O'Malley flipped one to Dick Post, and Post was stopped on the 20 yard line. O'Malley threw another to Jim Dockery, which was good for ten yards.

A seven yard pass, O'Malley to Dockery, brought the ball to the 3 yard line. O'Malley then smashed through center for two yards. On the next attempt O'Malley carried the ball over. He kicked the extra point.

Triple Pass Works.

A trick play, which earlier in the game had failed and cost Mount Carmel the ball on St. Mel's 30 yard line, clicked and started Mount Carmel's march to its second touchdown in the third period. The play, a triple pass behind the line of scrimmage, was good for 15 yards. Dockery finally carrying the ball. The gain brought the ball to St. Mel's five yard line. O'Malley needed only two attempts to carry the ball over, gaining three yards on the first attempt and the remainder on the second. O'Malley failed in the try for the extra point.

In addition to Capt. O'Malley it was the last league game for Dockery and Jimmy Murphy, who have led Mount Carmel to several victories.

Chicago Gets A.A.U. 1933 Track Events

New York, Nov. 20.—[Special.]—A stricter adherence to amateur ideals was the keynote of the 44th annual convention of the Amateur Athletic union, which got under way today. This point was stressed in the report of President Avery Brundage and in the actions of the various committees.

The track and field committee voted to award the men's national senior and junior track and field meet and the decathlon championship to Chicago. Denver had been in the field for these, but withdrew to permit Chicago to hold these games during the World's Fair. The pentathlon championship was awarded to New Jersey and the national indoor games to New York.

Treasury Shrinks $11,739.62.

In the reports of President Brundage and Secretary Treasurer Daniel J. Ferris of New York it was revealed that the A. A. U. treasury has shrunk $11,739.62 during the last year. The failure of the national boxing championships to realize a profit, extra expenses that resulted from the Olympics, and other items accounted for the deficit. However, the A. A. U. increased 25 per cent in membership despite the depression.

Boxing, ice hockey, and swimming groups all took steps to eliminate professional evils. The boxing committee made a radical move in voting almost unanimously to ban special bouts. Match bout competition presents few difficulties in New York, but in other parts of the country has led to invidious practices. Performers in special bouts having reputations that can be publicized have been able to demand from promoters more than amateur rewards.

Vote Not to Divorces Hockey.

A movement was afoot to divorce hockey from the A. A. U. and set up an independent body that would control amateurs, subsidized amateurs, and semi-professionals. Both the hockey committee and the legislation committee voted down this proposal.

The swimming committee refused to take action on the suggestion of Robert J. H. Kipruth, coach of Yale and twice coach of the American Olympic swimming team, to classify lifeguards as professionals.

The record committee accepted most of the marks that were placed before it.

Santa Clara Wins, 12-0, Over Olympic Club

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 20.—(AP)—Santa Clara defeated the San Francisco Olympic club, 12 to 0, today on a fog bound field where the ball was almost obscured from view in the last quarter. Santa Clara scored touchdowns in the second and last periods. Slavich made the first on a 40 yard pass from Sobrero. McCoy, substitute end, fell on a blocked punt behind the goal for the second.

Cummings Drives to Record at Los Angeles Speedway

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 20.—(AP)—Bill Cummings, Indianapolis race car driver, won the 93¾ mile feature event and established a new track record at the Legion Ascot speedway today. His time was 1:19:47 2-5. The old record was 1:11:20 2-5. Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis was second, Ernie Triplett of Los Angeles third, and Babe Stapp of Indianapolis fourth.

Open Season on Deer to Start in Wisconsin Today

BY BOB BECKER.

The big rifles will boom in the northwoods front this morning. Wisconsin starts its deer season and gives the sportsmen another large area of hunting territory for their offensive against buck deer. The Wisconsin season for the hunting of the white tails continues to the end of the month. The Michigan season also closes on that day.

As a rule Michigan can expect anywhere from 65,000 to 75,000 deer hunters in the woods during the open season. Just how many will try their luck at the game of outwitting the bucks in Wisconsin this year is a puzzle in view of conditions. But with railroads offering extremely low round trip week-end rates to points in the hunting country and with plenty of snow to make still hunting and tracking a real game, there should be a fairly large number of nonresident hunters tramping through the woods between now and the first of December. Irrespective of the hunting angle during this period the northwoods visitor is going to find the forested areas mighty attractive with their mantle of fresh clean snow.

To us a cedar or tamarack swamp always has been one of the most interesting places in the north country when we go fishing during the summer months. There is something about the seclusion of a swamp, the deep moss underfoot and the pitcher plants that intrigue the average outdoor fan. But last week when we prowled around a cedar swamp just to check up on the snow shoe hares and, if possible, see these animals in their changing coats, we decided that winter makes the yarding places of the deer far more attractive then they are in the summer months.

The heart of a cedar swamp is a land of hush after the first snow. Even the snow white blanket that clings to every branch adds to this illusion. The rabbits are quiet as they sneak through the tangled brush on their trails. The white throated sparrows are gone. Except for the distant call of a woodpecker the cedar thicket is a silent place where the fragrant evergreen branches retain their color even though almost buried by the snow.

Outdoor fans who expect to visit the north country at this time of the year will find the cheery, n erry little snow flake or snow bunting an interesting bird to observe. Of course, the ever present chickadee will be heard in the woods. But as likeable as he is, the snow bunting outshines all winter birds for cheeriness even when the now is deep and the thermometer is low.

On our recent trip to the upper peninsula of Michigan we saw one flock o. buntings that must have numbered 20 or 25 birds. The predominately white plumage on its wings, tail and body makes the snowflake easily identified. It is the only one of our sparrowlike birds that has this plumage.

11 TOUCHDOWNS GIVE KERSHALLA 2D PLACE IN EAST

New York, Nov. 20.—(AP)—While Lou Bush of Massachusetts State was being held scoreless for the first time this season in his closing game, Joe Kershalla of West Liberty State Teachers' college in West Virginia accomplished a remarkable scoring feat against Cedarville yesterday to take second place among the eastern football point getters.

Kershalla carried the ball over for 11 touchdowns and added five extra points, scoring 71 points. He had made one touchdown previously, giving him 77 points for the season, just half Bush's total. Bush wound up his campaign with 19 touchdowns for 114 points.

Bill Pendergast of Manhattan held third place with 73 points, one ahead of Shepherd of Western Maryland.

Abe George of Cornell, with 14 points after touchdowns, and Clayman of Tufts, with three field goals, held first places in those two specialities without dispute, although neither added to his total yesterday.

Boxing Business Picks Up; Many Bouts for Week

New York, Nov. 20.—(AP)—The boxing business shows signs of improvement this week with a flock of fights listed but outstanding battles still are few and far between.

The high spots of the week consist of a battle for the middleweight championship recognition within the limits of the state of New York, and nontitle appearances of a small group of assorted champions.

Chic Devlin of San Francisco and Ben Jeby of New York clash over the 15 round route at the St. Nicholas arena, New York, tomorrow night and the winner is to be recognized by the New York athletic commission as world middleweight title holder.

Maxie Rosenbloom of New York, boxing's perpetual motion man, who seldom takes a vacation from fighting and almost never risks the light heavyweight championship which some states recognize as being his, meets Tony Poloni of Reno in a ten round bout at Sacramento, Cal., Wednesday.

The young Mexican, Baby Arizmendi, who is recognized by the California athletic commission as featherweight title holder, meets Varias Milling, Filipino, in a ten rounder at Los Angeles Tuesday. Bouts of the week's national schedule include:

Pourquoipasto Captures Trip Magne Steeplechase

AUTEUIL, France, Nov. 20.—(AP)—Pourquoipasto, owned by J. A. Fernandes and trained by D. Tortorelo, won the Trip Hagne steeplechase, leading Heliopoulos Brasero by four lengths. Pierre Wertheimer's Le Commissaire was third. The race, over a 3,100 meter course, was valued at 50,000 francs [$2,000], and the winner paid 12½ to five.

Foley, Assistant Coach at Fordham, Is Dead

New York, Nov. 20.—(AP)—Frank [Pat] Foley, assistant line coach of the Fordham university football team, died today in the University hospital. He was operated on last Thursday for appendicitis. Foley was graduated at Fordham in 1930. He played tackle on the varsity team in his junior and senior years.

TOMMY PAUL TO FIGHT FRIDAY ON WHITE CITY CARD

Dazzo, Wiseman or Sharkey Sought for Bout.

Tommy Paul, world's featherweight champion, will arrive today for a 10 round nontitle bout at White City Friday night, Mique Malloy, promoter, announced last night. Malloy hopes to use Paul Dazzo, Hymie Wiseman, or Jackie Sharkey against Paul in his first appearance in Chicago.

Malloy will present two bouts at six rounds and three at four to complete the card. Joey Bosak, Blue Island featherweight, who gave Sharkey an interesting battle recently, may face Georgie Nate of South Bend, Ind., in a six rounder. A four round contest between Joey Medill and Patsy Flannigan is being arranged.

King Levinsky will make his first start in Chicago since he fought Mickey Walker six months ago, when he clashes with Primo Carnera at the Stadium Nov. 30. Since that match Levinsky has met Johnny Risko, Angus Snyder, and Joe Sekyra. King knocked out Snyder and beat Sekyra. Levinsky will resume training today at Trafton's gymnasium. Carnera is scheduled to arrive Saturday to finish drills for the return bout. Primo won a decision last November.

Ten bouts will compose the boxing tournament between St. Philip High school and St. Alphonsus of the Catholic Youth Organization at St. Philip's gymnasium Friday. Four players on the St. Philip football eleven are members of the boxing team. They are Frank Sattler, Art Winneback, Pug Miller, and Phil Kenneally. Kenneally will clash with Johnny Brennan. In the first half of the windup, Al Garcia will meet Frankie Yukon, while Jimmy Webbs faces Frankie Bochus in the second half. Five other bouts and one wrestling match will complete the card.

ONE MATCH TO COMPLETE CARD FOR MAT CLUB

Only one more match remained to be made yesterday by Promoter Joe Coffey for his heavyweight wrestling program a week from tomorrow night at the Rainbo Fronton. More than 400 proven racers and prospective champions, including two two minute performers, will go on the block at the annual auction sale. The Walnut Hall

5,000 WELCOME MICHIGAN TEAM ON RETURN HOME

Champions Given Biggest Reception Since 1923.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 20.—[Special.]—Five thousand Michigan students and Ann Arbor townspeople greeted the Wolverine football squad here this afternoon on its return from Minneapolis where Saturday it clinched the Big Ten championship and a claim to national honors.

The reception was the first of any size that a Michigan team has received since 1923 when the titleholding team of that year reached here after the Minnesota game to find half the student body of the university crowded about the station.

Williamson Gets Cup.

Director Fielding H. Yost, Coach Harry Kipke, Capt. Ivan Williamson, and student manager Louis Colombo spoke to the crowd. Williamson was presented a cup by Joe Zias, student council president, in behalf of the student body.

Director Yost guarded the little brown jug until he was ready to surrender it to Henry Hatch, equipment manager.

Lauds Season Record.

Yost, in his comment, spoke of the offensive and defensive record of the team and said no team in the country had greater right to its honors than the Michigan eleven.

ILLINI BANQUET TONIGHT.

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 20.—[Special.]—Applauded for their battle against Ohio State, but lamenting that they were unable to score when opportunities came, Illinois football players today made ready for its annual dinner to be given tomorrow night by the Champaign Rotary club.

Bob Fletcher of Findlay, O., quarter back on the championship teams of 1918 and 1919 and the strong 1920 team, will speak.

The Illini will elect a captain from a list which includes Herman Walser, Ivan Schustek, Bob May, Casey Straw, and Fred Frink. All have played two years, but Frink, crippled early this season, has played only a few minutes. He was voted the team's most valuable player last year.

Coach Bob Zuppke will leave Tuesday for Philadelphia to see the Pennsylvania-Cornell game Thursday and then go to New York for the Army-Notre Dame encounter Saturday.

HANLEY AT PURDUE.

Coach Dick Hanley of Northwestern starts his after dinner orations tonight with a talk at Lafayette, Ind., where he will be a guest of honor at the annual Purdue football banquet.

Following tonight's speech Coach Hanley will continue on to Cincinnati where he is scheduled to speak at another football banquet tomorrow night. From Cincinnati he plans to continue on east to attend the Pennsylvania-Cornell game at Philadelphia Thanksgiving day and the Pittsburgh-Stanford game Saturday.

Hanley will serve in the capacity of a scout at the latter game, since the Wildcats play Stanford next fall. He will return to Chicago for the annual Northwestern football banquet Dec. 3 at the Sherman hotel, at which time next year's captain will be elected and letters awarded.

Meanwhile the Wildcats will assemble tomorrow to elect the player who was the most valuable member of the team during the last season. He will join with nine other players from conference schools in THE TRIBUNE contest to select the most valuable player to his team in the Big Ten.

Thus will end the 1932 football campaign as far as the Wildcats are concerned. Already eyes are being cast ahead to the 1933 season when the Purple hopes to regain its post among the leading teams. Two new teams, Stanford and Indiana, will appear on next season's schedule. The other teams are Iowa, Ohio, Minnesota, Illinois, Notre Dame and Michigan. All the games except that with Ohio will be played at Dyche stadium

TWELVE TOWNS SEEK CENTRAL LEAGUE BERTHS

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 20.—(AP)—Plans to mould the Central Baseball league into a strong class B loop were formed at a meeting of club owners today. President Frederick W. Howell of Dayton, O., presided.

While the definite makeup of the revised circuit is still uncertain, many towns are seeking franchises and its officials believe it will include most of the members of the old Central league of years ago.

The six cities now reported ready for membership are Dayton, O.; Fort Wayne, Evansville, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Springfield, O., and Terre Haute. Two other towns to fill out an eight club circuit are expected to be chosen from the following cities: Muncie, Richmond, Anderson and Gary, Ind.; Lima, O., and Muskegon, Mich.

Erie, Pa., and Youngstown, O., were in the league last year but are not included in the new organization.

SUSPEND SEIBERT, RANGER DEFENSE, IN SALARY FIGHT

New York, Nov. 20.—(AP)—Earl Seibert, defense player for the New York Rangers of the National Hockey league, tonight was suspended by Frank Calder, league president, for failing to agree to salary terms.

Seibert's suspension followed a lengthy conference between Calder and Col. John Hammond, owner of the Rangers. Calder's action was taken in accord with the provisions of the league's new rule whereby the president was empowered to suspend any holdout when the terms offered were, in his opinion, fair.

Senn High to Battle Alumni Eleven Thursday

Senn High school's annual Thanksgiving day football game against alumni stars will be played at Loyola field at 10 a. m. Thursday.

Field Goals Revived to Win Titles

ers' only defeat was by Purdue, 7 to 6, and they also tied Ohio State, 7 to 7. This record leaves Wisconsin in third place, a step ahead of Ohio.

Ohio Wins Two.

While the Buckeyes lost only one game [Michigan, 14 to 0], they won only two conference engagements and tied two others. Ohio's scoreless tie with Pittsburgh and its defeat of Pennsylvania adds to its record. Minnesota, in fifth position, lost three games, none, however, by more than a touchdown. The Gophers also whipped Nebraska, Big Six champion, which later tied Pittsburgh, by a point after touchdown, 7 to 6.

Northwestern ended its season by piling up a surprisingly large score against Iowa. The result was 44 to 6, with Iowa getting its second touchdown against conference opposition since 1929. Northwestern's schedule included every team which finished in the first division except Wisconsin, and of these Michigan, Ohio State, and Minnesota defeated the Wildcats, which obviously is one reason why Northwestern could do no better than top the second flight.

Irish Are Disappointing.

Purdue triumphed over Indiana, 25 to 7, in its final game, emphasizing again the contention of many that the Boilermakers were the best offensive team in the conference. However, Wisconsin led in scoring with 105 points to Purdue's 101. Michigan, the new champion, scored 83 points and easily had the best defensive record. Northwestern was the only conference team to cross Michigan's goal line.

The conclusion of the season also ends the 41st and last year for Coach A. A. Stagg at the University of Chicago, there being no other announcement since that which indicated Coach Stagg would be retired in accordance with a university ruling. Coach Stagg's 41st football team was not the best of his record career, but the Maroons upset Indiana, while losing four conference games, and tied Yale, 7 to 7.

Notre Dame defeated Navy Saturday at Cleveland, 12 to 0, before a record crowd of 70,000. The game was distinctly disappointing in that the anticipated Notre Dame offense did not materialize. Judged by its showing Saturday Notre Dame will be hard pressed to prevent Army from winning a second successive game, something the Cadets never have done in the history of the series. Saturday Army defeated West Virginia Wesleyan, 7 to 0.

Playing conditions in the east were bad Saturday. Several of the leaders, including Colgate and Brown, rested waiting for Thanksgiving day. Yale's victory over Harvard, 19 to 0, headlined Saturday's play. The victory also reflects credit to Princeton, which tied Yale the week before. Carnegie Tech, beaten 42 to 0 by Notre Dame, held Pittsburgh to 6 to 0 Saturday. Pitt won from the Irish, 12 to 0.

Detroit Loses, 7-0.

Columbia and Syracuse played a scoreless tie, while Fordham won its second intersectional victory, taking the measure of Oregon State, 8 to 6.

Michigan State defeated Detroit, 7 to 0. Marquette evened its intersectional average by whipping Washington and Jefferson, 6 to 0. North Dakota gave De Paul university its first beating of the year, 13 to 6, although the Blue Demons previously had been tied twice.

Texas Christian won from Rice, 16 to 6, in its march toward the Southwest conference title. In the Southern conference Auburn moved within a game of the title by disposing of Georgia, 14 to 7.

California and Stanford concluded the Big Three rivalry on the coast with a scoreless tie. Both had been beaten by Southern California. California [Los Angeles], now tied with the Trojans for the Pacific coast lead, although beaten by St. Mary's, a non-conference school, defeated Montana, 32 to 0.

Sing Sing's Line Holds Danbury at Goal; Tie, 6 to 6

Ossining, N. Y., Nov. 20.—(AP)—The Sing Sing Black Sheep fought valiantly today and staved off a football defeat at the hands of the Danbury Trojans. The final score was 6 to 6, the first tie game since the convicts started playing football last year.

The 2,000 convicts and 1,370 outsiders cheered repeatedly in the final minutes of the game when Sing Sing stiffened to hold off the Trojan attack. After a steady march down the field the Danbury team had the ball on the one yard line on a first down.

Three line bucks were tried, but the convict linemen held like the stone walls encircling their playing field. Then the Trojans tried an end run, but half the Black Sheep team broke through to stop the runner.

Hayes made the Sing Sing touchdown in the first period, crossing from the one yard line after he had made a 47 yard dash. Thompson scored for Danbury in the second period, going off tackle for 14 yards.

The convicts have played eight games this season, losing one and winning six.

Giants Hand Packers First Defeat, 6 to 0

college songs, but then the college poets are amateurs like the college players and cannot be expected to write as well as the pros.

The football field was still very gooey from the rain which marred the college games all over the east on Saturday, but the Giants, as they fought for their grand old man, Mr. Mara, were amazingly agile and held their feet much better than the Packers. They outgained the Packers from scrimmage, 110 yards to 55, and they completed seven of their forward passes, whereas the Green Bay team tried 16 and finished only five.

Along the line, notwithstanding a great preponderance of meat, the Packers were frequently pushed around by the more intelligent Giant athletes, who were playing their last game of the home season and wished to gain a victory as a testimonial to their employer. Arnold Herber, the Packers' star back, was thrown for several losses as he meditated far behind the scrimmage line, waiting for a catcher who could receive a pass.

Having been advertised as the greatest football team on earth, the Packers were a slight disappointment except to those loyal patrons of Tim Mara who chose to believe that the Packers were every bit as great as their billing claimed, but that the Giants were even greater.

Hubbard Piles 'Em Up.

There was a very fat man playing tackle for the Packers, a Mr. Hubbard, who stopped many of the Giants' rushes by merely refusing to move out of the way. He covers several acres of ground standing still, and when he lies down his effective area as an obstruction is doubled. He usually lay down and the Giants would come along, interference and all, to crash into this mass, glance off, and drop from the shock. But there were also a few times when he did not move out of the way of his own backs, and they recoiled from their impacts with his inert, immovable mass like birdshot off the hide of a dreadnaught and got up holding their heads dizzily. Finally, at one stage when they had the ball, the Packers got him out of there because they were using up miles of yardage trying to run plays around him.

The Giants came through for the grand old man who keeps them out of the ranks of the unemployed just before the end of the first half. They were on their ten yard line one minute and over the Packers' goal a minute later, beginning with a punt to Johnny Blood, the Packers' half back, which popped out of his arms about midfield. Grant recovered for the Giants and a pass moved them along to the Packers' 34 yard line. Three plays from that point gave the Giants a net gain of two yards and on the fourth down McBride went over to his right to throw a pass diagonally to his left, which Flaherty caught and carried over from the five yard line.

All Very Simple.

The victory was won as simply as that and was defended throughout the second half by the superior football of the Giants, who had the personal as well as the partisan sympathy of the attendance because they seemed such little boys by comparison.

The turnstiles recorded a profitable business with the tickets selling at $2 per copy and the day ended pleasantly for all including even the Packers, who must certainly be allowed to lose one now and again. And, anyway, they had this excuse that they were playing against a fanatic team, fired with the will to win for their employer.

Helen Moody Wins in Brussels Women's Doubles

BRUSSELS, Nov. 20.—(AP)—Helen Wills Moody and Peggie Scrivener of England defeated Collette Rosambert of France and Josane Sigart of Belgium, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, in a women's doubles tennis match here today. Mrs. Moody and Christian Bousus of France were beaten in mixed doubles by Mlle. Sigart and Marcel Bernard of France.

31 Battle in Joliet C. Y. O. Bouts Tonight

Thirty-one boxers, representing the pick of amateurs in Will and Kankakee counties, will compete tonight in the Joliet quarter finals of the Catholic youth organization tournament. The bouts will be held at De La Salle High school.

Probably the greatest interest centers around the featherweight class in which Joe Roman holds the spotlight. All four boys in this division showed exceptional ability in the preliminaries, especially Howard Neveau of St. Rose of Lima parish, Kankakee.

A Pair of Champions.

Both Roman and Neveau have a long list of victories. Neveau won the bantamweight championship of Will county this year and last. He was a runnerup in the Joliet Golden Gloves and C. Y. O. tournaments in 1931. Roman won the Golden Gloves featherweight championship this year. He was intercity champion in 1930.

Joseph Montell, Bloom Township High school lightweight, who represents St. Rocco's parish, Chicago Heights, is a candidate for a place on the Joliet sectional team. He has strong opposition in Russell Kamp, John Gregorec, and Allen McConnell.

North Section Tomorrow.

Boxers in the North section, including those from parishes in Lake county, will hold their quarter-finals tomorrow night at the C. Y. O. center at 31 East Congress street.

GANO A. C. LOSES.

Gano A. C. football team met its first defeat in two years yesterday, losing to the Gouwens Auto Parts, 6 to 0, at 115th and Halsted streets.

NOTRE DAME HAS ONE WEEK TO GET BACK IN STRIDE

Offense Must Click or Lose to Army.

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 20.—[Special.]—A Notre Dame team which has failed to reach the traditional offensive heights of Irish elevens will have to get started this week or go down to defeat again. It meets the Army, which lost only to Pittsburgh, and that by one touchdown, at Yankee stadium in New York, before a sell-out crowd of 80,000.

Army has gained in power and prestige each week, winning from Harvard, 46 to 0, the worst licking Harvard has ever taken on its home field. That the cadets are pointing for their games with Notre Dame and Navy is indicated by the opposition they have met the last two weeks.

Army Squad Rests.

Yesterday the Army varsity played only two minutes, which was enough to push over a touchdown for a 7 to 0 victory over West Virginia Wesleyan. The previous week it ran over North Dakota State. The Army seeks to win its second game in a row from Notre Dame, a feat the cadets have been unable to accomplish since the series started in 1913. The fact that the under dog wins as often as not in this series is the only consolation Notre Dame has.

Dick Pfefferle, reserve left tackle, was injured in the Navy game and will be unable to play against Army. Ray Brancheau, right half back, also was banged up and may not play. Otherwise the first two teams came through in good shape. It's the team's play, however, which is worrying Coach Hunk Anderson.

How About Some Blocking?

"They block standing up. They don't mow 'em down like they used to. They don't run hard enough, and they seem half hearted on offense," Anderson said today. "On defense they have been playing fairly good ball, but you can't make touchdowns without blocking."

Anderson indicated that there may be further shakeups in the lineup for the Army game. A combination of first, second, and third team men played in Saturday's game as the second team. This squad made both touchdowns against Navy and may be the first team this week.

ST. RITA WINS, 13-6.

St. Rita High school defeated Fox Valley of Aurora, 13 to 6, on the former's field yesterday. Eicus scored St. Rita's two touchdowns.

TOP GRADE LIENS IN BOND MARKET PERFORM WELL

Mixed News Serves to Slow Up Trading.

New York, Nov. 20.—(AP)—Faced with numerous worldwide economic, social, and political imponderables, the bond market gave a relatively good account of itself during the last week.

While the general averages suffered from the erratic fluctuations of the semi-speculative groups, which emulated almost daily the swings of common shares, highest grade investment issues maintained a steady to firm position. Trading was at an extremely low ebb and in many instances there were considerable gaps between bids and offers.

Events of Interest.

News of interest to senior security holders included the foreign war debt negotiations, which may mean a further depletion of the government's income this fiscal year of some $270,000,000; resignation of the German chancellory of Von Papen, weakness of the British pound sterling, attributed to the debt situation; bank suspensions in Pittsburgh, the lower drift of grain prices, and the somewhat more than seasonal decline in freight car loadings.

Encouraging factors were the rather optimistic reports of week-end trade reviews which found business holding some of its recent fall improvement, only a slight sag in steel production and electric power output, and a betterment in banking conditions, notwithstanding some scattered "situations" in a few sections of the country.

Rails Take Heart.

The railroads took heart following announcement that the Reconstruction Finance corporation would grant a loan of some $31,000,000 to aid the Baltimore and Ohio in refunding a large maturity next March. More than $6,000,000 was to be made available immediately for holders of the maturing 4½s, who will express the refunding plan and deposit their securities within the next month. Secondary rail liens, however, after a brief enthusiastic flurry, dropped back and B. & O. bonds sagged with the rest.

There were few conclusive trends in the utilities and industrials. Some of the oils improved and a number of the "gilt edge" power and light and communications company loans recorded fractional advances. Moving picture corporation liens were a trifle unsettled, earnings reports and theater leasing problems of this group making for much uncertainty.

The United States government department firmed substantially with the decision of the federal reserve system that it would continue its easy money policy for the time being and not disturb its holdings of treasury securities.

Lincoln National Life Insurance.

Could you please tell me if Lincoln National Life Insurance company is a good insurance company? I am thinking of taking out insurance, but want to find out first if it is a good company.—Mrs. M. M.

Lincoln National Life Insurance company (Fort Wayne, Ind.) was incorporated in 1905. It is a stock company. In 1917 it reinsured the business of Pioneer Life Insurance company and in July, 1929, it reinsured Globe Life of Omaha. In December, 1929, it took over the reinsurance business of American Life of Texas. In October, 1928, it purchased Merchants' Life Insurance of Des Moines.

Growth has been rapid. Insurance in force at the close of 1931 was $921,289,000, against $890,892,000 the year before; $404,061,000 on Dec. 31, 1925, $25,084,000 at the close of 1915, and $532,000 on Dec. 31, 1905.

Income in 1931 was $26,472,000 and disbursements, including $202,000 dividends to policy holders, were $20,133,000.

Admitted assets on Dec. 31, 1931, totaled $82,189,000. Of these 8 per cent was in real estate, 59 per cent in mortgage loans, 1 per cent in collateral loans, 18 per cent in policy loans and premium notes, 4 per cent in bonds (amortized values), 3 per cent in stocks (June 30, 1931, values), and 1 per cent in cash.

Of total mortgages, $11,279,000 are secured by farm properties and $37,761,000 by other properties.

The company has reputable backing and is under able management. Policy holders' surplus is sufficient and the reserve basis is strong. Expense ratio is low and its mortality rate is favorable.

The company operates in 31 states of the United States and District of Columbia.

It has an excellent reputation.

Do Rights.

Please give me a report on do rights listed on the New York exchange market, as I am considering purchasing a couple of thousand do rights if it's O. K.—Mrs. E. S.

A right is a privilege to purchase stock of a company at a specified price. It is apparent that unless the stock which can be purchased with the right is selling at a price higher than that which the right enables the holder to purchase it these rights have only a speculative value. In other words, rights are options to purchase. The "do" to which you refer is a stock exchange quotation table abbreviation for "ditto" and refers to the name of the company appearing directly above.

WHEAT SO LOW FLOUR IN LOAF OF BREAD IS 1C

Need Buying Power to Raise Prices.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Present prices for wheat are practically the lowest known, and flour never was so low priced as at present. One authority on flour milling and baking says there is not more than 1c worth of flour in a loaf of bread. Millers are making no money. Elevator interests, however, are getting good carrying charges. Stocks are large and liquidation of December contracts in all grains has been heavy in the last week and promises to continue off and on for another week or more. There is a large open interest in December in all speculative markets.

There is plenty of room for enlargement in the buying power and for advanced prices. In the previous week prices on all grains showed fair gains, practically all of which were lost, and the close on wheat futures Saturday in Chicago recorded net losses of 1⅞@2⅝c. Corn was off ½@2c, oats ½@⅝c, rye 1¾@1¾c, and barley 1¾@3c, as compared with previous week.

Optimistic View of Wheat.

"More people are beginning to believe that the present wheat market, once liquidated, will have recorded prices that will never again be duplicated," says George E. Saunders of Abbott, Hoppin & Co., in a survey of the world situation.

"The world's unwanted surplus is only about 300,000,000 bu. Disjointed international relativities had allocated it all to the United States, a staggering load for the country. But world's surplus markets are equalizing, and comparative equality once reached each world's surplus producer automatically reassumes its pro rata share of the load with corresponding relief to holders, both actual and speculative," he said.

Bearish Conditions Discounted.

All bearish conditions have been discounted in all grains, but a greatly increased buying power is necessary to bring about materially higher prices. The farm board was said to have been active in changing its December into the May delivery.

At the close on Saturday December wheat in Chicago was 43¼@43¼c, May 48⅝@48⅝c, July 49⅝@50c. Offers on May wheat have sold within the week, good until May 31, 1933, at 35c, and at the close that price was asked with 33c bid. Prices for the week follow:

High Premiums for Cash Corn.

Cash corn, both old and new, is bringing the highest premiums of the year, with farmers' offerings moderate and primary receipts larger than the previous week and last year. Shipments, however, last week were more than double the previous week's and

Cash Register Plans Change in Its Setup

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 20.—A plan providing for changes in the capital structure of the National Cash Register company, which would result in changing the present common A and common B stock into one issue and would remove from the common B stock the right to elect a majority of the board of directors under certain circumstances, has been approved by the directors of the company and will be acted upon by stockholders at a special meeting in Baltimore on Dec. 15. This was announced today.

Edward A. Deeds, chairman of the board, and Frederick B. Patterson, president of the company, issued a statement announcing the proposed plan in which they said:

"The directors of your company believe that the capital structure of the company would be improved if there were only one class of common stock, of which every share had the same rights with respect to voting and dividends. Under such capital structure, the possibility of a majority of the common B stock would be removed.

See Greater Stability.

"It is the conclusion of the directors, ater full consideration, that the plan would result in greater stability of control, and in this and other respects would be to the advantage of all the stockholders. The directors accordingly recommend the adoption of this plan, as well as their proposal to reduce the capital of the company."

At present the common B stock may elect a majority of the directors and the class A stock may elect the remaining directors unless, at the time of an election, two or more quarterly preferential dividends on the class A stock are in arrears, or in any preceding year the net earnings available for the class A stock have been less than $3 a share and the deficiency is not made good in later fiscal periods. In the latter event the two classes of stock have equal voting rights. There have been no dividends paid on the class A stock since Oct. 15, 1931.

Details of Plan.

The statement issued by the company set forth that:

"Under the plan the 1,190,000 shares of class A stock now outstanding would be increased by 238,000 shares, which additional shares amounting to 20 per cent, will be distributed as a splitup pro rata among the class A stockholders. In addition, a new class of stock, consisting of 200,000 shares of class C stock, will be authorized to be exchanged for the present 400,000 outstanding class D shares on the basis of one-half share of the new C stock for each outstanding share of B stock. This new class C stock will be entitled to the same rights as the A stock as to liquidation, voting, and dividends.

"Upon completion of the exchange the A and C stocks become a single class of common stock, entitled to elect all of the directors of the company under all conditions."

The directors' plan for reducing the capital of the company calls for a cut of $17,793,335, from $42,213,335 to $24,420,000, represented by stock without par value. This $17,793,335, the statement said, will be transferred from capital account to capital surplus.

Demand for Rayon Ahead of Producing Capacities

Trade circles hear that demand for acetate rayon is far in excess of present producing capacities. Some of the smaller concerns are said to have sold far ahead and withdrawn price lists temporarily.

CONFIRM SALE OF ENGINEERING BLDG.--$500,000

Property Bid In for Bondholders.

BY AL CHASE.

Purchase of the Engineering building property, at the southwest corner of Wacker drive and Wells street, for $500,000 on behalf of the bondholders who deposited their securities with the American Bond and Mortgage company protective committee, has been confirmed by Judge William V. Brothers of the Circuit court. Settlement of the nondepositing bondholders' claims on the basis of this foreclosure sale, will be at the rate of approximately $14 on each $100 of bonds. The property just bought is security for a Series A first mortgage bond issue of $3,500,000, dated June 1, 1927.

Under the reorganization plan formulated by the committee, of which Craig B. Hazlewood is chairman, the depositing bondholders are to become the real owners of the property without the delay ordinarily required for the expiration of the redemption period. This will permit the property to be taken out of receivership and placed under ownership management.

Outlines Advantage of Plan.

"The advantage of this plan is: first, that is permits the bondholders to benefit from all of the income of the property without the necessary expenses attached to receivership, which, although conserving the income during receivership, does handicap the property's earning capacity," said Mr. Hazlewood.

"This move also should have the effect of increasing income, due to the fact that the receiver can make leases only for his term of occupation, whereas the owner is in a position to negotiate with responsible tenants for term leases."

Junior claims against the property and the equity of redemption were consolidated into one holding, giving the committee control of all rights of redemption. Recognition is to be given to this consolidated claim, in the form of trust certificates, representing 12½ per cent of the outstanding stock in the new company being formed to hold title to and operate the property, and a settlement in cash and notes.

Obviates Usual Delay.

"This arrangement permits the completion of the reorganization without the delay of fifteen months to three years which would be required if the redemption period were to be allowed to run its course," said Mr. Hazlewood. "Thus, while this settlement represents an item of expense, the cost should be more than equalized by benefits arising out of the quick reorganization."

RECEIVERS TO REPORT SOON ON MIDDLE WEST SYSTEM COMPANIES

As a result of many requests for information as to the earnings of the various operating companies embraced in the Middle West system, Edward N. Hurley and Charles A. McCulloch, receivers of Middle West Utilities company, made the following announcement:

"We desire and intend to make available, as soon as practicable, to the securities holders and the public generally, complete information about the financial condition and earnings of the different properties under our direction.

"We have recently visited many of the important properties of the system and will complete our inspection of others at an early date. In the course of our examination we are advising adjustments of which accounting disposition is now being made.

"Independent auditors have been employed by the receivers to examine the accounts of the constituent companies and are now engaged in doing preliminary work on the audit for the year 1932. As soon as this preliminary work is finished, and in advance of the publication of the earnings for the year, it is probable that preliminary earnings statements can be released for the more important operating properties covering the 1932 period either through October or November.

"We expect to have final audited statements covering the year 1932 in the hands of the public as soon after the close of the year as practicable, and thereafter we plan to issue quarterly statements."

Buyers from 32 States Attend Furniture Market

N. Y. CENTRAL'S LOAN WILL GIVE JOBS TO 1,500 MEN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 20.—As a result of a $2,500,000 loan obtained from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, the New York Central railroad will put 1,500 more men to work at East Buffalo, N. Y., and Indianapolis on Dec. 1. The railroad explained its apportionment of work in the following statement:

"Of the three plans suggested in its appplication to the Reconstruction Finance corporation for a loan of $2,500,000 to increase employment, the road has selected that one which calls for repairing 10,000 steel box cars and 3,000 automobile box cars. The program is tentative and, if conditions require, part of the money may be diverted to other uses, such as repairing locomotives.

"The program adopted will provide work also for 1,000 other men for five months in factories that supply materials used in making the repairs. The loan is to be advanced in monthly installments of $350,000."

Reserve Says All Industries' Output Up 10%

Washington, D. C., Nov. 20.—(AP)—Industrial production, including both manufacturers and mining, was 10 per cent larger in September than in August.

The federal reserve board so reported today in its final review for September, adding that sharp increases in physical output in the recent months had been largely concentrated in the textile and leather industries, but in September included meat packing products, steel, and coal.

Total Output Off One-half.

Reviewing the business slump, the board said:

"In the period of reduced activity the output of durable goods has fallen much more rapidly than the output of goods in the lighter industries. This happened in 1920-21, in 1924, and in 1927, and has been especially pronounced in the present depression.

"From the high point of 1929 manufacturing output as a whole has fallen about one-half. The output of durable goods, however, has fallen by about three-fourths, while in other industries the decline, except for a few months in the last summer, has been less than one-fourth."

Country's Gold Gains.

The board said that in October there was a further increase in member bank reserve balances reflecting an addition of about $70,000,000 to the country's monetary gold, a $120,000,000 return of currency from circulation and $30,000,000 additional issues of national bank notes.

Deposits of reopened banks in October almost equaled the deposits of those closed during the month, the board said. There were 24 banks with deposits of $31,028,000 that reopened in October, while 27 banks, with deposits of $31,899,000 suspended operations.

Credit Men Report Upward Trend in Collections

New York, Nov. 20.—(AP)—The November survey by the official publication of the National Association of Credit Men notes a "definite continuation of the sharp upward trend in national sales and collection conditions. For the second consecutive month five cities in both sales and collections classifications report the situation as good, while a large number characterize it as fair."

STOCK MARKET, BEWILDERED BY EVENTS, CRAWLS

Trade Is Light and Range Narrow.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 20.—Gathering uncertainties on the score of war debts, taxes, tariffs, and other problems of the moment have brought the stock market once more to a bewildered standstill. For the last week the list has been moving sidewise along a level about midway between the extreme bear movement lows of early July and the highs of the summer upturn registered around Sept. 8, with activity slowed down to the proverbial snail's pace.

From the 2,600,000 turnover runup to climax the two day post-election rally last Friday a week ago, volume tapered down to an average of 750,000 shares daily and ended the week with a total of only 385,556 shares for the Saturday half session, which, incidentally, set a new eight year record for narrow dealings, with only 313 of the 1,200 odd issues listed being traded in.

Professional Affair.

This means that the market has degenerated into an out and out professional affair again, with the narrow price swings recorded from day to day indicating nothing more important than the give and take activities of a handfull of floor traders.

The six sessions of the week have resulted in a change of only 1.39 points in the average price of the fifty representative stocks figuring in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S daily index. On only one day of the six has a change of more than one point been recorded.

War Debts Loom Ahead.

Brokerage opinion is that not much relief from the stalemate can be expected until some of the perplexities now beclouding speculative thought can be cleared away. The war debt question looms presently as a hurdle of particularly terrifying proportions and the street is looking forward to next Tuesday's conference between

The following information has been furnished by Mr. Roy S. Nelson, President of Louisiana Steam Generating Corporation:

Louisiana Steam Generating Corporation was incorporated (under the name of Louisiana Steam Products, Inc.) in Louisiana in October, 1929, to construct and operate a steam and electric generating station near Baton Rouge. This plant, which has been in operation since May, 1930, supplies under contract practically the entire steam and electric power requirements of the refinery of Standard Oil Company of Louisiana, a subsidiary of Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. This refinery, one of the largest in the world, has a capacity of approximately 100,000 barrels of crude oil per day.

In supplying the oil refinery, steam is generated at high pressure and, after passing through turbines for the generation of electric power, is delivered to the refinery for its processes to the extent of nearly 6 billion pounds of steam per year. During the 12 months ended September 30, 1932, 205,572,300 Kwh. of electricity were generated, of which about 30% were used by the oil refinery, the balance being utilized by the systems of Baton Rouge Electric Company and Gulf States Utilities Company, both of which are Constituent Companies of Engineers Public Service Company furnishing electric service in southern Louisiana and southeastern Texas. The station is designed to permit the use as fuel of certain residuals from the oil refinery's operations.

Gross earnings for the 12 months ending September 30, 1932 were $2,322,625, and the balance available for interest, Federal Income Tax, retirements, etc., was over 3.9 times the annual interest requirements on these Bonds.

The foregoing is subject to the more complete information contained in the offering circular, copy of which may be had upon request. We offer these Bonds, when, as and if issued and received by us, subject to approval of counsel. It is expected that delivery of definitive Bonds will be made on or about December 1, 1932.

Export business has fallen off, because of the recent advance in prices, putting American corn out of line with foreign competitive markets. December corn closed Saturday at 24⅝@24¾c, with May 30¼c and July 31⅜@31⅝c. Changes from December to May contracts werr on a big scale at a widening spread. Prices follow:

Late Break in Barley.

Speculative interest in barley is not so keen, although the trade strongly believes that real beer will be manufactured in a liberal way within a few months. The break in other grains, however, took the edge off the market and carried prices lower, with malting 32@43c for fair to good, depending on quality and color.

Second Mortgage Rates High.

TO THE EDITOR: I would appreciate your advice on the following matters if possible.

[a] Are there any concerns making second mortgage loans at present? If so, about what proportion of the present value of a house will they loan assuming it is already mortgaged for one-half its present value.

[b] Am I correct in the belief that in foreclosure the original owner ordinarily receives eighteen months to redeem? Can the trust deed be so worded that the owner loses this right? Are copies of the various trust deeds on file in the recorder's office?

[c] In figuring the present value of homes for mortgage purposes for the home loan bank, etc., about what percentage is that value of what it would have cost to build that home five years ago? In other words, building costs are much lower now. About how much?—D. F. A.

ANSWER: [a] Yes, but the rates in most cases are excessive and therefore, second mortgages financing should be eliminated whenever possible. We do not recommend the names of individuals or companies.

[b] When bill of foreclosure is filed, you are ordered to appear in court. Approximately three months from that date, the sale takes place. You then have twelve months in which to redeem unless a judgment creditor is created which would give you an additional three months. Generally speaking, at least fifteen months are required although most people appear to have accepted eighteen months as the time offered. The period of redemption cannot be avoided in a trust deed. Trust deeds are filed in the recorder's office and open for inspection.

[c] Present building costs are approximately 1-3 less.

Threatened with Foreclosure.

TO THE EDITOR: I own a home in Gary. My 1929 taxes have been sold and due to unemployment, I have fallen behind in my payments. The first mortgage holder threatens to foreclose and put me out. What is the period of redemption in Indiana if bill of foreclosure is filed. Do I have two years time to redeem back taxes? —A. S.

ANSWER: There is four months' time from date judgment is received and the date of sale. The period of redemption is twelve months from date of sale. If the mortgage is well secured and you have a substantial equity, you would not be required to vacate until the period of redemption has expired. This question is determined by the court.

Taxes in Indiana can be redeemed within two years from date of sale. The penalty is 10 per cent for the first six months; 15 per cent for the second six months, and 25 per cent the last year.

TELLS CHANGES IN ECONOMIC FABRIC OF NATION

Mills Report Shows Labor Produces More.

New York, Nov. 20.—(AP)—Basic changes in America's economic fabric, changes that caused "a surge forward in industrial productivity" rivaling the industrial revolution of the 18th and early 19th centuries, are described in an exhaustive study of the National Bureau of Economic Research made public today.

Publication of the study, entitled "Economic Tendencies in the United States," written by Frederick C. Mills, of the bureau's staff, has been sponsored by the committee on recent economic changes of the President's conference on unemployment, which is interested, according to the bureau's statement, "in securing a factual basis for an understanding of the present depression."

Among the primary changes in the period 1922-'29, recorded by Dr. Mills, are retardation of population growth, emphasis on the production of durable and capital goods, the maintenance of price disparities, and the tremendous increase in the productivity of manufacturing labor.

Population Growth.

The population grew at the rate of 2 per cent a year in the pre-war year against 1.4 per cent in the 1922-'29 period.

Per head of population, Dr. Mills calculates, pre-war and post-war rates of advance in industrial production were 1.1 per cent and 2.4 per cent respectively, or a doubled rate of advance in only 8 years. In this same period, productivity of labor increased so that 70 men in 1929 could do the work that required 100 men in 1919.

Another major change is found in rate of displacement of men by technical advance. Between 1899 and 1914 an average of 21 men out of every 1,000 were forced out of given manufacturing industries. But at the same time, new employment average 249 to 1,000.

Difference After War.

"Markedly different," Dr. Mills says, "is the post-war record. On the average . . . 49 men of every 1,000 employed were separated from given manufacturing industries. Additions to the number employed averaged 48 to every 1,000 on the pay rolls of manufacturing plants."

An important change leading to instability was the new emphasis on the production of durable, lasting goods.

Production of this sort of material increased at the rate of 5.9 per cent in the 1922-'29 period, while nondurable goods increased at the rate of 2.8 per cent.

Large Capital Exports.

Accompanying this expansion were large exports of capital, which enabled other countries to buy volume of merchandise from the United States, absorbing part of the nation's extraordinary productivity. At the same time prices of raw materials were low, so that the farmers and other raw material producers did not receive a proportionate share of the national income, while those functioning in producing enjoyed larger profits.

"The economic insecurity, the marked inequalities of distribution, the collapse that crowned the expansion," Dr. Mills says, "we must learn to avoid. But the period also brought increased productivity, an expanding volume of production, an advance in the real rewards of the average man—desirable objectives all, under any economic system."

$1,061,299 PROFIT FOR YEAR SHOWN BY BROWN SHOE

Net earnings of $1,061,299 are shown for the Brown Shoe company of St. Louis for the year ending Oct. 31, 1932, according to the company's annual report made public yesterday by John A. Bush, president. The earnings are equivalent to $3.28 per share on common stock outstanding after preferred dividends and after deduction of all charges and taxes.

Current assets in relation to current liabilities show a ratio of better than twelve to one, the report sets forth, while cash alone is more than three times current liabilities.

"During the year," the report continues, "there was retired and canceled $375,000 preferred stock of the company, which covers retirement provisions through 1934. Five thousand shares of common stock were also acquired and paid for at a price below the net quick asset value, and are held in the treasury, thus strengthening the position of both preferred and common stocks."

Indications point to improved business conditions for the coming spring as compared with the same period a year ago, Bush continued. "Stocks on retailers' shelves," he added, "have been very much reduced and the old shoes in consumers' closets have been worn out. The low in hide prices has been reached, and hides are now selling above the low price without any great accumulation of either leather or hides. The employment situation is bound to improve."

MANUFACTURERS WILL BE HEADED BY GEN. HAMMOND

Election of Gen. Thomas S. Hammond, president of the Whiting corporation, to the presidency of the Illinois Manufacturers' association at the organization's annual meeting on Dec. 13 is practically assured as a result of his nomination by the nominating committee.

Gen. Hammond had a distinguished record at the front in the war, serving with the 148th and 124th field artillery regiments. He was commissioned as general of the 58th infantry brigade, Illinois National Guard, by Gov. Emmerson.

Other officers placed in nomination are the following: First vice president, A. J. McKay, Matthiessen-Hagler Zinc company, Chicago; second vice president, Ray Wantz, Rockford Fiber Container company, Rockford, and treasurer, Paul Schulze of the Paul Schulze Biscuit company.

GET "SET" WITH A GOOD POSITION BY THANKSGIVING DAY!

Mr. Willing-to-Work,
Chicagoan!
Dear Sir:

MANY Chicago homes are happy today. Through this opportunity there will be roast turkey and "trimmings" on the table, fuel in the cellar, food in the pantry, good clothes in the closets, and "gifts" under the parents' noses in the bank! No more tense nerves and apprehension. A WORLD-WIDE NEW OPPORTUNITY IS RESPONSIBLE! That plus determination, character, honest, sustained effort MANY Cook County men made money last Saturday night. Many more are making money this moment!—from $24.41 to $75 or more TODAY. How are a few Chicago area Electrolux, Inc. (not refrigeration) earnings: A chemistry professor, MORE than his college job paid. A metallurgical engineer above his steel company income. A tool and die maker, $230 first half of Nov. An auto repair man, $135 last week. An advertising man; a showman, a mechanic, a handy man, two salesmen, from $20 to $25 each one day. Three former salesmen, and a stock-room boy, $60 in a day. An old railroad man, $39.41 one evening. A young man who had been working for $17 a week, $209 in 10 days. A group of 65 men, OVER $7,400 EACH in 1931. An opportunity for men from all walks of life!

ALL of these men and THOUSANDS MORE now permanently, gainfully employed by Electrolux, Inc., make money regularly—more as they learn more. Character, hard work, adaptability required. We prefer family men, 25 to 45. You do not buy, deposit or invest a penny. No large "know-how" to acquire. While your initial income may be small, you can work up to weekly earnings of $100, $125, $150 or more. If you are accepted now and like our work you will start at once. No "tide-over" or "easier" type or part-time men considered. References required. Personal interview TODAY ONLY—9:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. MONDAY, Nov. 21, Room 329 Madison-Kedzie Bldg., 0 S Kedzie Ave.

MEN—TODAY!

AT 11 A. M. OR 2 P. M. NO OTHER TIME.

WE ARE INTERESTED IN TALKING TO a few serious-minded men, outlining a plan that will bring you the same early continuous and increasing financial results it has brought others! Men in this business make $400, $500, $600, $800 and up to and beyond $1,000 monthly! We will thoroughly learn how to properly present our product that leads in sales in 47 countries and continues several large factories busy, giving employment to thousands of persons. This business is in its 34th consecutive month of increase in America, and 1932 will be one of the best years ever made. We will feed with less for a few weeks as they learn this business. Our men are from all walks of life and many are making far more than they ever dreamed possible in trades or professions. This work is year 'round and permanent.

MANY MEN in this business enjoy increased weekly earnings because of proper training and intelligent effort. You start on the same basis as the oldest men in Electrolux (not refrigeration) and enjoy the same financial independence.

GOOD CHARACTER REFERENCES are necessary. We prefer men 26 to 45 and with families. NO INVESTMENT or deposit of any kind required. We prefer men living from Devon-av. north to Waukegan.

APPLY PROMPTLY AT 11 A. M. OR 2 P. M.—NO other time. It will be the best investment of time you ever made. Call at Room 205, 1569 Sherman-av., Evanston, Monday, Nov. 21. Men living in Lake county write for appointment.
